SCHOOL STARS IN BIG MEET

All roads seemed to lead up Huntington avenue this afternoon, for a great host of New England schoolboys, who marched in cheering sections to the annual B. A. A. school athletic meet at Mechanics Hall. The building was crowded at 2 o'clock when the first event was called.

The hall resembled a political convention, with a dozen or more candidates for the highest office, and the rousing school cheers made the building ring with a babel of sound.

George V. Brown of the B. A. A., under whose auspices the games were again held this year, had more work than the field marshal of an army, but everything was in readiness when the pistol rang out for the starting of the first sprint events, in which Exeter ruled a strong favorite.

The Worcester Academy boys marched upon Boston in a phalanx, and were supremely confident of taking their rival, Exeter, into camp. It was admitted that some disintegration of the Exeter team, rather militated against its chances, but there was no evidence of lack of confidence among the host of Exonians, and their little cheering army made the rafters ring.

Taken collectively, the 300 school athletes were about the finest collection from the preparatory schools of New England that has competed in the history of the games. It was freely declared that many of the records were in danger of being eclipsed, and the large fields in the various events assured the most spirited contests.

Worcester Academy and Exeter really made the games a dual affair, as to the determination of the winner, but there were a vast number of individual athletes from the smaller schools who seemed certain point winners, and who were splendidly remembered by the cheering sections of their schoolmates.

Luck was about even in the drawing for positions between Exeter and Worcester, each drawing one pole position. There were chances now for boys of other schools to win several events that these two schools had diagnosed to win.

Last year the Exonians scored more than twice as many points as the school from the heart of the State, but its victorious team is crippled up, while the Worcester School has retained many of its athletes.

NOTED ARCHITECT VICTIM OF TRAGEDY

CHICAGO, Feb. 25.—William J. Brinkman, a noted architect and designer of Catholic church buildings, met death in a mysterious manner at Hamilton Park, his mutilated body being found early to-day at Seventy-third street and the Rock Island tracks. He made a trip into the city last night, but for what purpose his family and friends have been unable to ascertain.

FORMER SEA PALACE NOW FISHING BOAT

Edged among fishing craft at T Wharf is the steam yacht Polynia, thirty years ago one of the most elaborate of floating palaces. "Tillie" is now emblazoned on the vessel's stern.

Times have gone wrong with the once splendid yacht. She is being robbed of precious woods and costly furnishings and is to be used as a porgie catcher.

1,100 HOMELESS BY FIRE.

MANILA, Feb. 25.—Three hundred native dwelling in the village of Tondo were destroyed by fire to-day. The Mary Johnson Charity Hospital was partly damaged and the patients had to be carried out. Eleven hundred natives are homeless.

RED SOX IN FIRST BATTLE

By MERTON E. BURKE.

American Correspondent on "Red Sox" Coast-to-Coast Tour.

Merton E. Burke

REDONDO BEACH, Calif., Feb. 25.—The great American game on at Redondo. The Red Sox play the opening game of the year this afternoon, it now being planned to line them up for a six-inning scrub game. This morning, the boys limbered up with the usual batting, fielding, base running, pitching and catching stunts. The rigors of the hard work were relieved by an hour's frolic in the magnificent hotel salt water bathing pavilion.

The nerve-racking, trying days of training are on in earnest for the Boston boys. Training time is always a worrisome period for the members of a big team. Then it is that the manager must select his best material for the season's battles, must develop the youngsters, must speed up the lagging older members, must shift a man here and there, in fact must know the exact ability and reliability of every man on the job.

The recruits are always in a nervous mood on the first days, feeling always that their errors count more than their clever plays. Somehow it does seem to a player that when he makes a star play no one is looking, whereas the eyes of the whole world are directed his way when he muffs an easy fly.

Some of the heavyweights begin to worry about their weight, and the slender youths wish their hair was beginning to turn gray and that they were stouter. Everybody is on the keen edge of expectancy and achievement is the keynote of the day.

Recruit Pitchers Look Good.

Manager Donovan, who took the Boston boys in hand last year and knitted together a united team of hard working men, finds himself with a large squad to bear with, and the work of trying out the staff of youngsters is a laborious one. The manager, with the fairness for which he is known across the continent, is giving each and every player consideration.

Manager Donovan never jumps to conclusions and never judges a man from reputation. He tries them out and judges them on their merits.

This year he is particularly interested in his new pitchers and although, of course, he doesn't care to mention names he tells me he has two recruits in mind who are likely to make a name for themselves. He is well equipped with outfielders too, and at least one of the new catchers is bound to stick. Quiet, but keen of observation, he stands up behind the bat when the boys are being tried out and watches their every move.

At the morning training, to-day, smiling Tom Madden had the younger squad in hand. They appeared on the scene at 9 o'clock. At 10:30 Wagner marshaled his force of regulars.

Following the practice the bunch adjourned to the bath house for merry antics in the gymnasium equipment.

At yesterday's session three of the players suffered slight hurts. Joe Wood slipped while sliding down a water chute and strained his leg. Engle and Gardner, when diving struck their heads on the cement floor of the tank.

Youngsters Show Good Form.

The young pitchers, Buzick, Pape, Arellanes, Mahoney and Bedient have been given their tryouts. Bedient appeared in excellent shape, while Arellanes seemed to have recovered his old time niftiness. "Hap" Myers, who has been playing all Winter, was particularly in form.

Buck O'Brien of Brockton is well looked upon by shrewd judges. Kleinow did most of the catching, while Duffy Lewis officiated at the bat.

Tris Speaker, the picturesque cowboy, just in from the Texas range, chased the long ones out in center field.

One of the pleasant surprises of the first day's practice was the work of Sawyer. He is a serious young man, who knows how to play good ball.

In the first squad on the field, yesterday, was Thoney, who has suffered injuries to his arm, but feels he has gotten back into shape; Buzick, Pierce, Nunamaker, Myers, Yerkes, who is looked upon as a clever shortstop; Nebinger, Mahoney, Sawyer, Madden, who is captain of the crew; Perry, considered as an asset to the outfield; Hollis, Killilay, Janvrin, a schoolboy who has the base running record; Engle, Riggert, another swift outfielder; Arellanes, who has played some before; Piepke, Dale and Standfield.

In the second detail there were Frank Smith, Charles Smith, Bedient, Sheehan, a young giant just corraled for the catching staff; Collins, McHale, Bradley, Gardiner, Cicotte, Carrigan, Wood, Wagner, skipper of the bunch; Kleinow, Mozer, Thomas, Williams, Hooper, Lewis, Karger and Speaker.

The squads are now very pleasantly located, having unpacked their trunks and settled down.

JUDGE CHARGES CUSUMANO JURY

PLYMOUTH, Feb. 25.—Judge Schofield began his address to the jury in the trial of Lena Cusumano and Harry Marshall, for the murder of her husband, at 12:10 p. m. to-day. At 1 o'clock a recess was taken for an hour when the charge was resumed.

Apparently fearing that Marshall would make an attempt to escape to-day, or that his friends might try to rescue him from custody as his trial draws to a close, he was not only handcuffed, but held by a long chain as he was brought to-day from prison to the courtroom.

The deputy sheriffs had manacled the man's hands in front of him. Then they fastened a chain six or eight feet long to the handcuffs and Deputy Sheriff John H. Condon walked behind the prisoner, holding onto the chain. So far as one could tell from the attitude of Marshall he had not dreamed of trying to escape and there was no movement in the crowd that indicated any feeling in favor of attempting his rescue.

District Attorney Barker began his address by declaring that this was a tragedy of lowly people. But, he said, they should have left their barbarous customs at home in foreign countries when they sailed for the American shore.

Shows Wire to Jury.

"It is your duty as jurors to use common sense in this case and not allow the dust that the defence kicked up to get into your eyes. It is reasonable to believe that Marshall boasted of his conquest of Lena Cusumano from the vanity that he has shown in this court room.

"On September 18, at the time the children went to buy candy, there were left at the Cusumano home three people—Frank Cusumano and the two defendants. No one has been produced who has seen Frank Cusumano alive since.

"If the body of the man found in the water was not the victim of murder, why was this loop (holding up some telegraph wire) made in the wire so that something could be attached to it to weigh the body down?

"Michael Lauro, the brother of Lena Cusumano, kissed the feet of the dead man when the body was found. Would he have done that if he had not recognized the body as that of Frank Cusumano?

Skull Is Exhibited.

"Lena Cusumano did not deny on the witness stand that the body found on the beach was that of her husband. She practically admitted that it was the body of her husband."

District Attorney Barker took the skull of the dead man out of the telescope bag and showed it to the jury. He explained that the two missing teeth could be accounted for by the probability that they had fallen out after death. This was to refute the claim that Cusumano had no missing teeth. Then he took up the other bones of the body that had been used in the case and held them up before the jury, explaining that the weapon used could have made the wounds that the bones showed.

AUTO DRIVER IS HURT IN CRASH

One man was injured and several others were shaken up when a large automobile and a street car collided on Massachusetts avenue, near Riverbank Court, Cambridge, to-day. The injured man, believed to be Harry Gavel of No. 5 Glenwood road, Somerville, who conducts an automobile garage in this city, was hurried to the Charlesgate Hospital nearby suffering from a fractured skull and internal injuries. His name was placed on the dangerous list. The automobile, which was in charge of Gavel, was wrecked.

DAVIE'S POVERTY DOUBTED

William B. Watts, chief inspector of the Boston police, said to-day that he did not believe the story of poverty and privation that was told by Robert E. Davie, the young Boston financial skyrocket, under arrest in Rio Janeiro, Brazil, and wanted here for alleged swindles that it has been figured will amount to something like $500,000.

Davie, according to cables from Rio Janeiro, told a story to the effect that he was penniless; had to work his way to South America in a menial position, and was compelled to sleep many nights in the park for want of money. He had just succeeded in getting a job when he was arrested.

"I don't believe he is broke," said Chief Watts. "We have positive knowledge that just before he went away from here that he got cash amounting to from $8,000 to $10,000 on stocks that he negotiated. All that money has not been spent since he left.

Fight on Extradition.

"I don't believe the story that he will come back without a fight, either. We will have a lot of trouble about getting him extradited, believe me. It may take two or three months before we get him back here, but we'll get him.

"I have not decided yet who will go after him. Two men will probably go (His friends say that the Chief himself will be one of them.) Whoever goes will take the steamer, Byron, that sails from New York on March 4. It is a seventeen days' trip down there, so you see it will be some time before we get Davie back to Boston, even though he comes without a fight, which I do not believe he will."

Statement by Family.

Mrs. Davie, the wife of the American fugitive, was unwilling to meet a reporter to-day at the home of her mother, Mrs. James E. Cotter, No. 24 Perkins avenue, Hyde Park, but she consented to a statement by her mother and after it was written down she read it and declared it covered the ground.

"We cannot say what his actions will force us to do," her mother wrote in reply to this question; "Will you or Mrs. Davie testify against Davie?"

"We consider him as an outsider, as one who was never a member of our family, as never married to my daughter," Mrs. Cotter dictated. "The report that my daughter has expressed a willingness to testify against her husband isn't true. Mrs. Davie did not see any reporters and was not interviewed.

"She did not say that she will be willing and ready to testify against her husband. She knows absolutely nothing of his business affairs, because when they lived together he was simply a clerk for Wiggin & Elwell."

The rise of Davie in Boston from a State street errand boy was striking, but the finish to his career is even more startling. He was found starving on the streets of sabial that he will see that Davie is well taken care of until the Boston officers arrive to take him back. The man is now sick from hunger and want.

Chief Watts and Inspector Peyton of the Boston police to-day prepared for their trip to Rio Janeiro to bring Davie back. Governor Foss has applied to Washington for extradition papers and they should arrive to-night.

Wife to Aid Authorities.

Davie fled from Boston in November. He kept up appearances of having thousands of dollars at his call to the very last. He is charged with swindling clients out of about $500,000 entrusted to him to carry out brokerage commissions. How much of this he carried away with him is not known. That he had to work his way from New York to South America shows that it must have been only a few dollars. It is thought that he lost it all in speculations of his own in the "bull" market of October.

Davie's wife, who left him during the height of his career, is at the home of her father, James E. Cotter.

"I will help out the authorities in any way," said Mrs. Davie. "I want to help out those people who lost anything through dealing with Mr. Davie."

PERJURY CHARGE AGAINST FOELKER

NEW YORK, Feb. 25.—Max D. Steuer, who was attorney for former Senator Frank J. Gardner, in his bribery trial, announced to-day that he had filed charges of perjury against Congressman Otto G. Foelker, Gardner's accuser, with District Attorney Whitman. Steuer said that he had evidence that Foelker lied when he said he took the regent's examinations for admission to the bar. Foelker, the attorney declared, paid Max Sonisky $500 to take the examination for him.

W. J. KELIHER, SURRENDERED BY BONDING COMPANY

WILLIAM J. KELIHER.

TWO HURT IN TROLLEY CRASH

Two men were severely injured and more than a dozen other persons, half of whom were women, were badly shaken up and frightened when two Beachmont cars crashed together in a head-on collision on Winthrop street, Beachmont, a short distance from the Beachmont depot, to-day.

Charles Allen, a passenger on one of the cars, was taken to his home on Pearl street, Beachmont, in the police ambulance, suffering from a broken arm and several broken ribs. When the crash came he was thrown against the controller in the vestibule of one of the cars, and he may be internally injured.

James McGill, the motorman of the inward-bound car, was badly cut about the head by flying glass. Dr. J. H. Meigs treated him. Other passengers, most of them women, were cared for by Drs. Meigs and E. W. Brown, who came to the scene of the collision a few minutes after it occurred.

The two cars were inward and outward bound on the Beachmont route of the Boston & Northern street railway. The inward-bound left the Beachmont end of the route on time, at 9:01. Nine minutes later it reached the depot. It was in charge of Motorman McGill and Conductor John J. Sullivan.

At the depot the street car tracks cross those of the Revere Beach & Lynn road. McGill made the crossing and then started on to the turnout on the further side of the crossing. The vestibule of his car and the front trucks had just passed on to the switch when the outward-bound car came along. It slid down the track with the brakes applied, but the rails were slippery.

WOMEN UNSAFE IN NEW YORK AFTER 11

ALBANY, Feb. 25.—"No woman can be safe on the streets of New York after 11 o'clock at night," declared Mrs. Florence Kelly, general secretary of the National Consumers' League, arguing that the metropolis would be a much better place to live in if women had the ballot. "Every arrest of a girl found out after 11 o'clock at night," said Mrs. Kelly, "goes to the credit of the policeman who makes the arrest."

"BIG BILL" IS AGAIN PLACED IN JAIL CELL

Bonding Company Which Gave $50,000 Bail Surrenders Alleged Bank Wrecker and He Is Sent Back to Jail.

William J. ("Big Bill") Keliher, now under suspended sentence of eighteen years in State prison for helping George W. Coleman wreck the National City Bank of Cambridge, was to-day surrendered to the Federal authorities by his bondsman, the Massachusetts Bonding and Insurance Company. Keliher had been at liberty under $50,000 bail, furnished by this company. He was locked up in the East Cambridge jail this afternoon.

AGAIN IN IRON CAGE IN COURT.

Keliher was taken before Judge Dodge in the United States Circuit Court at 11 o'clock. There Lawyer Thomas Hunt of the firm of Gaston, Snow & Saltonstall, representing the bonding company, surrendered him. He said:

"I desire to surrender William J. Keliher, as the Massachusetts Bonding and Insurance Company does not care to be responsible for him any longer."

Judge Dodge accepted for the court. He then ordered him into the custody of the United States marshal, pending his getting new bail. Keliher was taken from the courtroom and once more placed in the iron cage in the marshal's office. This time the door was not locked, however, the grill work outside being locked.

Goes to Court with Marshals.

The proceedings started early to-day when Vice-President R. M. Lamphire of the bonding company went to Keliher's home in Winthrop. He sent word to "Big Bill," who had not yet arisen, that the company wanted to see him.

"Is it for the purpose of surrendering me?" asked Keliher. He was told that it was.

"Very well. I'll dress and be down shortly," he sent back word.

In the meantime Deputy Marshals Watters and Young had been informed and they arrived at the Keliher home in time to accompany Keliher to Boston. He was in charge of Constable Robert Reid acting for the company.

As "Big Bill" said good-by to his wife, preparing to leave, Mrs. Keliher said to him:

"William, what shall I have for supper to-night?"

"Oh, I guess you'd better have roast chicken," replied Keliher.

After the proceedings at the Federal building Keliher turned to his guards and said:

Cancels Chicken Order.

"Just before I left home I told my wife to have roast chicken for supper. I guess I'd better telephone and cancel that order. I'll tell her that I've got an invitation to dine with some friends at East Cambridge."

Keliher referred to the East Cambridge jail, where he was taken. He can be released again if he secures a new bond.

On the way to the Federal building Keliher appeared dejected. He kept putting his hand to his head. Finally as the party left Rowe's wharf Keliher turned to Mr. Lamphire and said:

"Gee, I had a bad night last night. I drank a whole bottle of Scotch."

Mr. Lamphire understood. "Will you have a drink, Bill?" he asked. "Big Bill" allowed that he would.

When the drinks were ordered Keliher called for brandy. He poured out a "stiff" drink—five fingers, those who were with him asserted. Bill gulped it down.

"I don't feel right yet," he said. "I

MORGAN MAKES NORTON BANKER

NEW YORK, Feb. 25.—Charles D. Norton, secretary to President Taft, is to become vice-president of the First National Bank of this city when he leaves the White House. He will be a protege of J. Pierpont Morgan, for the First National Bank is a Morgan institution and at present it is engaged in a tremendous struggle with the National City Bank for supremacy in financial affairs in the United States.

The battle between these two financial giants aligns all the big interests in the country, for backing the National City Bank are the Rockefeller family and the vast resources of the Standard Oil Company. It has long been Mr. Morgan's ambition to make the First National a "government bank."

The institution has resources aggregating more than $20,000,000. By allying himself with the Morgan group Norton, who was formerly in the insurance business in Chicago, gets upon the real firing line of the great financial battle. He will succeed Thomas W. Lamont, who recently entered the Morgan firm.

Although officials of the First National Bank to-day refused to make any statement relative to the coming of Mr. Norton to the institution, Wall street interests say that Mr. Norton has already accepted the offer and the announcement of his election to the first vice-presidency of the Morgan Bank will soon follow his retirement from public life.

The keen eyes of Mr. Morgan long ago detected the business acumen of President Taft's secretary and decided to get him to come to New York instead of returning to Chicago, where he built up his business reputation.

MEXICAN REGULARS GET REINFORCEMENT

SAN DIEGO, Cal., Feb. 25.—Reinforcements on the Mexican gunboat Guerrero arrived at Ensenada to-day and joined the Federals. Many residents of the city have fled, fearing a battle. Word from there brought the intelligence that Harry Bell, the American accused of being a spy, is still alive, although in irons in jail.

TUCSON, Ariz., Feb. 25.—Captain Camilo Medina of the insurrectos, who has just arrived from Nogales, reports the wounding of Colonel Kosterlitzky, commander of the Rurales in Sonora, in a fight between the Rurales and insurrectos near Cananea on Wednesday.

THE LOWEST ADVERTISING RATE IN NEW ENGLAND

No newspaper in New England reaches for its advertisers as many readers at as low a cost as does

THE BOSTON AMERICAN

It costs an advertiser but one and one-hundredths cents ($.0101) per inch per thousand circulation, or seven-hundred-twenty-five thousandths of a mill ($.000725) per agate line per thousand circulation.

From the most reliable statistics available the BOSTON AMERICAN is surpassed in the lowness of its advertising rate (and then only by a slight margin) by only two newspapers in America—the New York Journal and the Portland (Oregon) Journal, a paper with $7,161 circulation.

The circulation of the AMERICAN is subject to the most rigid investigation by anyone at any time.

KELIHER GOES TO JAIL AGAIN

guess I'd better have another one." He took another one of the same size. Then they left for the Federal building.

Keliher arrived at the Federal Building with the rest of his party at 10:30 o'clock. Pending the formality of surrender he was taken to the marshals office, where he waited. He was not placed in the cage.

Follows an Injunction.

Keliher's surrender is the result of the injunction obtained against him and the bonding company by Receiver John L. Bates of the wrecked bank. Yesterday the injunction was continued in force indefinitely by Judge Hammond in the Supreme Court.

The injunction restrained either Keliher or the bonding company from disposing or transferring any of the securities deposited with them for the purpose of securing Keliher's bond.

Receiver Bates's action is for the purpose of later bringing action against Keliher to recover $185,000 that he received from Coleman for gambling. Receiver Bates hopes to recover this money for the depositors of the bank.

The appeal of Keliher from the sentence of eighteen years in State Prison is now before the United States Circuit Court of Appeals. Briefs have been filed by his lawyers giving reasons why a new trial should be granted him. Opposing briefs have been filed by the government. A decision is expected within the next ten days.

If Keliher wins his case must be retried. If he loses he will be taken at once to Charlestown to commence the serving of his long term.

The Company's Reason.

There was much interest at the Federal building in finding out just why the bonding company surrendered Keliher.

There was a report that the company had asked for more security, and that Keliher could not furnish it, so the company surrendered him.

President T. J. Falvey of the company said this afternoon:

"The injunction granted Receiver Bates lessened the value of the security we held and did not afford us ample protection from now on.

"We have never received a cent from Keliher himself. The security was placed with us by another man. I do not care to give you his name. I think the security belonged to him."

The statement by President Falvey gave rise to the question of whose money has been keeping Keliher out of jail. Various names suggested for the bondsmen included Martin Walsh, the missing member of the gang which is declared to have taken Coleman's money away from him. Walsh is declared to have plenty of money.

CHARLTON CASE GOES TO SUPREME COURT

WASHINGTON, Feb. 25.—The case of Porter Charlton, the young American who is in custody on the charge of murdering his wife in Italy last year, reached the Supreme Court of the United States on an appeal from the decision of the United States Circuit Court for New Jersey, denying his application for a writ of habeas corpus. The State courts had decided the case to be extraditable. A large number of errors in the ruling of the Circuit Court are alleged.

FISHERMEN LOST IN NORTH SEA GALE

HULL, Eng., Feb. 25.—Reports of a number of shipping disasters were received here to-day as a result of a gale which swept the coasts of the North Sea. The Ketch Gustav foundered in the mouth of the Humber and the captain was drowned. The balance of the crew has a narrow escape from death. Several fishing vessels were wrecked.

'DOCTORS, BAH!' SAYS CARUSO

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Feb. 25.—Enrico Caruso's sore throat does not prevent him eating three hearty meals a day. In answering questions, he could not or would not raise his voice above a harsh whisper to-day, though it is rumored in his hotel, the Traymore, that he has emitted a couple of roars at servants who displeased him.

"How goes the voice?" asked a reporter.

"Not so well; not so well," was the dejected whisper. "I can scarcely make myself heard, and those people there (pointing over his shoulder to the hotel), they don't understand. They are fools, some of them. Sometimes I almost think they laugh at me."

The whisper was almost shrill as he reached the close of his sentence and he looked disgusted.

"Do the doctors say you will be well again soon?"

"Bah!" A snap of the fingers and a whirl of the hand toward the leaden sky showed what the singer meant to convey. "That for the doctors! What do they know about my throat? Where they can see they say it is doing nicely. But what do they know about what is inside—what I feel? They know nothing of the feelings of a singer, of an artist. They are merely butchers! Bah!"

HARVARD HONORS FIVE EX-PROFESSORS

Five Harvard professors have been appointed professors emeritus in the department in which they instructed during their service at the university. Such a large number of appointments makes a record. The men thus honored and their departments follow: Silas Marcus MacVane, McLean professor of ancient and modern history, emeritus from September 1, 1911; William Barker Hills, associate professor of chemistry, emeritus from February 13, 1911; John Williams White, professor of Greek, emeritus from February 13, 1911; Charles Joyce White, professor of mathematics, emeritus from February 13, 1911, and Frederic Ward Putnam, Peabody professor of American archaeology and ethnology, emeritus from February 13, 1911.

SCHOLARS NEED MORE PASTIME SAYS EVANS

An arraignment of the elementary school system by George W. Evans, headmaster of the Charlestown High School, and diversity of opinion as to the best kind of education for the child unfitted for the high school were features of the meeting of the education conference of the Boston 1915 movement, held at the Tremont building. "The fault is not with the teachers," said Mr. Evans, "but with the system that stifles the interest and initiativeness in the elementary school, that fixes a schedule of study and pumps it into him on schedule time. There should be more pastime and less discipline; the work should be made practical and attractive."

ARCHBISHOP PLATO TO OFFICIATE HERE

Archbishop Plato, head of the Russian church in the archdiocese of New York, will officiate to-morrow morning at the dedication of the Church of the Holy Trinity, Boston's new Russian church, at No. 6 Dearborn street, near the Dudley street terminal. The archbishop will be assisted by the Syrian bishop of Brooklyn, Mgr. Raphael; the dean of the Russian Cathedral of New York, Fr. Alexander Hatovitzky, and eight other priests and deacons.

American Accused of Swindling in Leipsic.

LEIPSIC—Samuel Jackson Wood, who says he is a New York merchant, is on trial in the Civil Court, charged with swindling William Kutschback out of $25,000. Kutschback, who was trained in newspaper work in New York, and who introduced in Germany the American custom of illustrating daily newspapers, was a successful publisher, owning several newspapers. He had one of the finest houses in Leipsic and lived like a prince until his generosity and readiness to believe and aid his friends resulted in his ruin, practically.

D'Aulby to Be Tried Again.

PARIS—"Count" D'Aulby de Gatigny, who was sentenced recently to a month's imprisonment for selling spurious wines to the Duchess de Choiseul Praslin, formerly Mrs. Charles Hamilton Paine of Boston, will be tried again, on the ground that the sentence was insufficient. The "Count" was originally charged with having swindled or attempted to swindle the Duchess out of $200,000 by means of spurious old masters and also through the sale of fake old wines, but the former case fell through.

Pastoral Stirs Lisbon.

LISBON—Much excitement prevails here following a report that the republic will take legal action against the patriarch of Lisbon for addressing a pastoral to the bishops and archbishops of all Portugal, harshly criticising the government for the proposed dissolution of the Union of State and the Church.

Rosebery Urges Dickens Fund.

LONDON—Lord Rosebery, speaking at the Mansion House in connection with the fund being raised on behalf of the descendants of the great novelist, expressed the hope that the United States would join in the movement.

BOSTON AMERICAN $35,000 PRIZE COUPON 1 VOTE

DISTRICT __________

NAME __________

TOWN AND STATE __________

VALUELESS AFTER MARCH 11, 1911.

SPECIAL RACE NEAR END

By THE CONTEST EDITOR.

The watchword just now for candidates in the AMERICAN'S $35,000 prize contest is "NEXT TUESDAY."

Tuesday marks the close of the special February competition for the FIFTY-THREE special prizes offered to the fifty-three candidates polling the highest vote BY SUBSCRIPTION between February 1 and 28 inclusive.

The fifty-three February prizes are:

One $600 Piano	$600
One Symphony Grand Graphophone	200
One $150 Diamond Ring	150
Ten $25 Gold Watches	250
Ten Silver Mesh Bags or ten $10 Solid Gold Monogram Rings	100
Ten $5 Sterling Silver, Silk Umbrellas	50
Ten $5 Solid Gold Fountain Pens	50
Ten $4 Cameras 3¼x4¼	40

The February special closes at 10 o'clock next Tuesday night. Votes by mail received up to 10 p. m. Tuesday (as shown by the postmark) will be accepted for the February special.

Does every candidate grasp the real importance of rushing in votes now, especially votes BY SUBSCRIPTION? Some hustling candidate is to be the winner by next Tuesday night of the $600 piano which is offered as first prize in the special February list. Fifty-two other candidates are to become winners of the fifty-two other prizes in the February special.

Watch for Names Sunday.

The names of the February winners will be published in the Sunday AMERICAN of March 5.

There is no need of dwelling upon the importance of being in that list of winners, not only for the sake of the February prizes, but also for the sake of the encouragement to yourself and your friends.

The announcement of February prize winners will be followed, on Sunday, March 12, by the first published list of candidates' standing, by district, in the main contest.

Only votes received up to and including February 28 will be included in the compilation of the first standing. This is another big reason to get in all possible votes before 10 p. m. next Tuesday.

The approach of March means that the AMERICAN'S $35,000 Prize Contest, with its 1,000 prizes, is nearly a month and a half old. It has run nearly one-quarter of its course. The $8,000 house and two lots at Riverton-on-the-Charles, which constitute the capital prize, are so much nearer being won. Likewise the automobiles, motor boats, pianos and other prizes are getting nearer and nearer the hands of some fortunate winners.

1911 Model Auto.

A candidate in District Five (New Hampshire and Vermont) writes to ask the Contest Editor whether the Maxwell auto offered as first prize in District Five is to be a 1911 model. It certainly is. And it will be a beauty, too. The Maxwell car offered in the AMERICAN'S contest is the larger car of the Maxwell-Briscoe factory and is equipped with top and windshield. The Maxwell name and the Maxwell reputation are such that they need no elaboration. In construction it is excelled by none. In ability it has proven itself the equal of any car anywhere near its selling price. It is the improved model of the Maxwell car in which, some few months ago F. J. Tyler, the local manager, established a world's record for non-engine stop performance.

Watch for the pictures of candidates published in the Sunday AMERICAN to-morrow.

FOSS TO NAME NEW JUDGE WEDNESDAY

The vacancy on the Superior Court bench caused by the election of Judge Robert O. Harris to Congress from the Fourteenth district, will be filled by Governor Foss on next Wednesday.

Strong pressure has been brought to bear upon the Governor to appoint Assistant Corporation Counsel John D. McLaughlin. Henry V. Cunningham is also being considered. Mr. Foss has discussed the qualifications of Roscoe E. Learned with a committee from the bar association.

PARKER MEMORIAL CONCERT TO-MORROW

To-morrow afternoon at 4 o'clock there will be given at the Parker Memorial Hall the first of a series of Sunday afternoon concerts under the auspices of the Parker Memorial. The artists will be the American String Quartet, consisting of Miss Gertrude Marshall and Miss Evelyn Street, violins; Miss Edith Jewell, viola, and Mrs. Susan Lord Brandegee, violoncello, assisted by Miss Rosetta Key, soprano, and Miss Bertha Schoff as accompanist.

PLAN "RECIPROCITY" POWER BOAT RACE

NEW YORK, Feb. 25.—W. R. Hearst, commodore of the Brooklyn Yacht Club, suggested a "reciprocity" power boat race between this country and Canada, in an address before the annual dinner of the club. Joseph Fleming Day, editor of a nautical publication, indorsed Mr. Hearst's suggestion. It was announced that July 1 has been selected as the day for the Cape May race for sailing craft and power boats.

THREE CITIES JEER TROUSER SKIRT

Madrid Wearers Mobbed; Police Escort Required for Wearer in New York City.

The trousers skirt disturbed the peace of three cities yesterday. In Paris two wearers of these were pelted with eggs; in Madrid two other women were mobbed, and in New York a girl in a harem skirt had to seek the protection of a policeman.

PARIS, Feb. 25.—Incidents of public disturbance accompanying the appearance in the streets of women wearing the new trousers skirt occur daily.

The Avenue de l'Opera was the scene of one of the more serious male outbreaks.

The woman, having been surrounded by a laughing, jeering crowd, was unable to proceed, and a "gentleman," taking advantage of the situation, purchased a basket of eggs from a dealer in a side street and distributed them among the other "gentlemen," who, in order to show their disapproval of what they considered unladylike conduct, pelted the helpless wearer of the new garment until a squad of police intervened and aided the woman to escape in an automobile.

Many Models Circulated.

Doubts appear to have arisen among the leading Paris dressmakers as to whether the skirt will be adopted by women as a general fashion. But few have been ordered thus far, and those have gone chiefly to women from abroad who were shopping here and wished to take home the latest sensation. Many models have been sent to prominent houses dealing in women's wear in New York city.

The journals publish medical opinions on the new style. Some aver that the wide trousers afford the wearer freer movement in walking and furnish less resistance to the wind, or to be recommended from the standpoint of good health. Other opinions to the contrary are expressed. Professor Debove, formerly dean of the Academy of Medicine, affirms in the Matin that women are not adapted for such garments.

Madrid Women Mobbed.

MADRID, Feb. 25.—Two women belonging to the most exclusive society circle of the capital appeared on the streets wearing the new Parisian trousers skirts, and were jeered and fairly mobbed. The crowd, which grew rapidly to great proportions, surrounded the exponents of advanced fashion and threatened violence.

A large force of police came to the protection of the women and cleared the streets.

Escort Required in New York.

NEW YORK, Feb. 25.—The Harem skirt appeared in town, played an engagement on Park Row, and went over to Brooklyn.

A newsboy near the postoffice shouted: "Pipe the woman with the trousers."

The woman was young and fair. The skirt was split from the knee down, making a pair of baggy trousers. A crowd collected, and at Beekman street a policeman had to take charge of her and escort her to the bridge, where she took a car for Brooklyn.

There was a variant of the trouser-skirt outbreak in Williamsburg when Josephine Frieder and Bertha Kinsko, living at No. 1,048 Manhattan avenue, caused a crowd of several thousand persons to collect when they appeared on the street in boys' costume. The pair thought it would be great fun, and donned their brothers' clothing. Their hair, however, refused to remain under the hats they wore, and it needed no eagle eye to guess the truth.

When a crowd collected that jeered them unmercifully the pair sat down and wept. Then they wept upon the shoulders of a policeman. Later, in the Manhattan Avenue Court, they were permitted to go.

IRISH PARTY NEEDS FUNDS

Both by cable and letter, strongly worded messages have come to America from the leaders of the Irish cause, in which no concealment is made of the fact that the Irish party, now in the final stage of its struggle, is already seriously handicapped for funds.

The expenses of the recent general election and the costly petition contests which the party was forced to defend, and the expense of maintaining the party in London, have so seriously depleted the party war chest that it is now certain it will empty by the end of March.

When Mr. Redmond and his brother envoys, Messrs. O'Connor, Devlin and Boyle, came to America last October, the pledges of support they received amounted to close on $200,000. Had all these pledges been made good the party would be in excellent financial condition to go on with the battle it is now sharing in so decisively at Westminster.

Situation Is Critical.

The condition of affairs has grown so critical that strong pressure is being brought to bear on Mr. Redmond to consider seriously a reversal of the party decision refusing to accept salaries as members of Parliament.

Redmond will have to be driven to extremities before he does this, for it would mean abandonment of the independent character of the Irish Nationalist party as it was founded by Parnell.

Boston branches of the United Irish League will hold meetings to-morrow for the purpose of taking steps to alleviate the crisis by which the Irish party is confronted.

Meeting at 8 P. M.

The principal conference will be held in the evening at 8 o'clock at the American House, when Boston Central Branch will hold a special meeting under the presidency of former Mayor Augustine J. Daly of Cambridge.

Among the men who will address the meeting, pointing out the duty of all Boston Irish people in this hour of crisis, will be Thomas B. Fitzpatrick, national treasurer of the league in American; John O'Callaghan, national secretary; Dr. C. J. Timmins of South Boston, the Rt. Rev. Monsignor O'Callaghan, Michael J. Jordan, Dr. J. T. Dillon, Dr. Henry V. McLaughlin, James E. Cotter, Mark H. Cryban, John Woods, Michael Maynes, Thomas Sproules, P. C. Kelly, Colonel Roger Scannell, John B. O'Higgins, Michael Morrison, M. P. Curran and Edward J. Slattery.

SHOEMAKERS TO MILLIONS

The Goodyear Welt system of shoe machinery first made it possible for the feet of the millions to be clad in high-grade shoes at moderate prices.

Less than a generation ago high-grade shoes made by shoemakers cost $10 to $20 a pair.

Only wealthy people could afford to wear them.

But today everybody can wear dressier shoes just as comfortable and durable as if hand sewed at one-third these former prices.

The best known trade-marked shoes are now made on the wonderful Goodyear Welt machines. All leading retailers sell Goodyear Welts. But you should learn how to distinguish them. The booklets tell you how.

USMC

Your name and address on a postcard brings these booklets without cost:

1. Contains an identifying list of over five hundred shoes sold under a special name or trade-mark, made by the Goodyear Welt process.
2. Describes the Goodyear Welt process in detail and pictures the sixty marvelous machines employed.
3. "The Secret of the Shoe—An Industry Transformed." The true story of a great American achievement.
4. "An Industrial City." Illustrated—descriptive of the great model factory of the United Shoe Machinery Company at Beverly, Massachusetts.

CALVE FORCED TO VACCINATION

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 25.—Although she traveled in the liner Chiyo Maru's most luxurious suite, Mme. Emma Calve was too tired to talk to-day after the steamer reached her from Honolulu. She was more so after the health officials had compelled her to be vaccinated.

The immigration inspector was peculiarly rasping. The purser had refused to take the responsibility of setting down the diva's age at "twenty," although she made the suggestion in writing. He left the age space blank. The immigration inspector, with a careless glance at her, set down "forty-four."

Calve was about to protest when he asked her name. She insisted it was Mme. Emma Calve. He insisted on making it Mrs. Casparri. With tragic mien the diva submitted.

Next came the customs officials. Then the quarantine officer caused her to be vaccinated (whether on arm is not known), because a suspicious rash had been discovered on the face of a second cabin child. She protested in vain.

MOTHER SAVES BOYS BUT BREAKS THIGH

Mrs. Mary Mahoney, of No. 30 I street, South Boston, saved her twelve-year-old son and her five-year-old nephew from being ground to death under the wheels of a trolley car at the corner of M and East Fourth streets, South Boston, when the youngsters were coasting down the steep hill on M street. Mrs. Mahoney was at the corner of Fourth street when she saw a car approaching rapidly. She yelled to the boys to stop, but as the hill is very steep this was impossible and she jumped into the way of the sled, swerving it to one side just in time to save the boys from going under the trucks. Mrs. Mahoney was thrown to the ground. At the Carney Hospital it was found that she had a broken left thigh. She was also bruised about the body.

DERAILED CAR STALLS TRAFFIC

Outward-bound cars at Roxbury Crossing were stalled early to-day by a car jumping the track. A South Boston-Roxbury Crossing car had just delivered its passengers and started to go up Tremont street under the railroad bridge. The forward trucks took the turn, but the rear trucks either jumped the track or the automatic switch worked too rapidly, for the rear trucks followed the tracks to the car barn, swinging the car at an angle of forty-five degrees.

CITY POINT LIFE SAVER ACCUSED

WASHINGTON, Feb. 25.—General Superintendent Kimball of the United States Life Saving Service is expected to begin at once an inquiry into the charges made by Representative O'Connell of Boston of indifference to duty on the part of Frederick E. Hamilton, keeper of the City Point life saving station, South Boston. Congressmen from all over the country inquired into the large number of drownings in the vicinity of the station.

Criticisms of Keeper Hamilton's conduct of the station were made on the floor of the House by Congressman O'Connell, who introduced an amendment to the sundry appropriation bill forbidding the payment of any money provided under it for the conduct of the City Point station by the present keeper.

Tell of Drowning.

Representative O'Connell explained he favored the amendment because of complaints to him that the keeper was indifferent in the discharge of his duty. He submitted two statements from John F. Stout of South Boston, which called attention to the large number of drownings in that vicinity and cited instances where the keeper had been warned of people in distress and where Hamilton, as alleged, did not respond as promptly as he should have done.

Mr. O'Connell submitted other letters which he said were from reputable people.

Congressmen's Queries.

Representatives Moore and Burke of Pennsylvania, Douglas of Ohio, Smith of Iowa and Crumpacker of Indiana, asked many questions about City Point. It was stated that the bay there is covered with boats and that drownings had occurred within a very short distance of the station. The case of Mrs. Mahegan, drowned within 100 feet of the boats, was mentioned during the debate.

The Senate has yet to pass upon the provision, and it remains to be seen whether it will not be struck out there and the matter turned over to the Treasury authorities. Hamilton receives a salary of $1,000 a year.

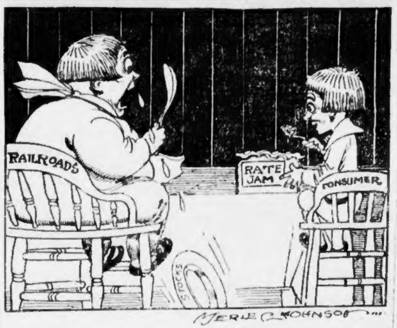
LITTLE BROTHER DIPS IN



MAYOR FINDS ANOTHER DEARO

PALM BEACH, Feb. 25.—Mayor Fitzgerald held an almost old-home in the dearoldnorthend reception when he discovered a regular "Dearo" down here. The Mayor and his party were about to start on an auto trip to Miami when Chauffeur Garrett of one of the cars greeted Boston's executive with the regulation North End greeting.

"I just can't get away from the Dearos," remarked the Mayor, as he took his seat in the car, after he and Garrett, who was born on Salem street, had exchanged the regulation grip of the Dear Old North End Protective, Social, Life Saving and Research Association.

"Business for Boston" was the Mayor's motto to-day when, talking with Fred Sterry, manager of the Hotel Plaza of New York, who is with his brother, Leland Sterry, at the Breakers Hotel. Leland Sterry will manage the new hotel in Copley square, Boston, and when the Mayor found most of the furnishings were to be put in by a Philadelphia company, he suggested giving it to a Boston concern, and as John Shepard and his son were not far away negotiations were started right off for Boston's business interests.

GUNBOAT MARIETTA AGAIN QUARANTINED

PORTSMOUTH, N. H., Feb. 25.—The United States gunboat Marietta arrived from Key West to-day, where the crew had been subjected to a yellow fever quarantine. It was the intention of the Navy Department to give the men a ten-day shore leave. The disappointment upon finding the measles quarantine at Portsmouth was great. Much dissatisfaction is being voiced here by the families of those confined on the Marietta, it being claimed that as measles is a children's disease, all those who have had it in the past should be allowed to visit their families.

BERNHARDT SEES STEEL STARS FLY

PITTSBURG, Feb. 25.—Sarah Bernhardt has seen the Pittsburg steel mills in full fire. She witnessed the sight at night, and from midnight, when she left the Nixon Theatre, until 4 o'clock in the morning she was escorted from one plant to another by Carnegie Steel Company officials. "It's beautiful," she remarked, as she shaded her eyes watching a Bessemer converter showering forth millions of stars.

RICH HINDU YOUTH IN BOSTON TO STUDY

Dilbag Sing, a Hindu youth from Marpo, India, is to study electrical engineering in Boston. He arrived on the Zeeland, from Liverpool. Dilbag had so much money that the immigration inspectors at once regarded him a most unusual alien. Besides cash, he had letters from his father, a wealthy merchant, which stated that further funds could be had for the asking. Office Secretary George F. Sturtevant of the Y. M. C. A. offered the facilities of the association to Dilbag.

FIRST SUFFRAGAN BISHOP IN AMERICA

NEW YORK, Feb. 25.—The first suffragan bishop of the Episcopal church in America was consecrated at Grace Church. He is the Rev. Dr. Charles Sumner Burch and he will probably act as assistant to Bishop Greer. The office of suffragan is of long standing in Great Britain. A suffragan ranks as a bishop in everything except that he has no vote in the house of bishops, and that, unlike a bishop coadjutor, he does not ascend to the rank of bishop on the death of his superior.

DIPHTHERIA EPEDEMIC AT JOHNS HOPKINS

BALTIMORE, Feb. 25.—Physicians of Johns Hopkins Hospital are fighting diphtheria within the hospital walls. There are thirty cases, including doctors, nurses, students of the medical school and patients. The operating rooms have been closed, scores of patients have been removed to other hospitals or their homes, and the hospital is practically quarantined.

RATIFICATION PLEASES JAPAN

WASHINGTON, Feb. 25.—News of the ratification of the new Japanese treaty of trade and navigation by the United States Senate was received with satisfaction in Tokio, according to cablegrams to-day. A members of the Japanese cabinet is quoted as saying:

"America will never regret this fresh evidence of confidence in the good faith of Japan. The United States has done a great thing for this country."

The Senate objection has been that it did not throw sufficient safeguards around the immigration of Japanese to the United States. Opposition was made by California and by the Pacific States generally.

The real basis for the belief that immigration is safeguarded is in the personal statement for his government of Baron Uchida. This was deemed sufficient certainty for the President and the State Department, and the President was active in his efforts to impress the California Legislature with his view of the treaty's efficiency and sufficiency.

HELPED MORSE SEND HIS FIRST MESSAGE

WASHINGTON, Feb. 25.—Henry M. Dollinger, eighty-nine, who helped Professor S. F. Morse to establish the first telegraph office ever opened, is dead. It was in connection with the demonstration made by Morse to Congress in 1844. Mr. Dollinger recently said of the event: "I remember well the two messages first sent from Baltimore. One announced the death of one of our naval commodores at Cadiz, Spain and the other told of the nomination of James K. Polk for President."

SAM WALTER FOSS DYING IN HOSPITAL

Sam Walter Foss, librarian of the Somerville Public Library, poet and author, who has been confined in the Bay State Hospital for a week, is reported sinking fast. Dr. Walker was summoned to his bedside early to-day. Foss was born in Candia, N. H., June 19, 1858, and graduated from Brown University in the class of 1882. He was appointed librarian of the Somerville Public Library in 1898.

D'AULBY TO BE PUT ON TRIAL AGAIN

TOURS, France, Feb. 25.—The swindling case against "Count" d'Aulby de Gatigny is to be revived. A new trial will be held. Such procedure in France implies a belief on the part of the government the evidence demands a more severe punishment.

D'Aulby's wife was, before her marriage, Miss Francesco M. Lunt, daughter of a Boston attorney.

FARNSWORTH GIVES TRAVEL LECTURE

Eugene Farnsworth gave the second in his series of travel talks in Tremont Temple last night, taking for his subject Dalmatia. As no other territory in Europe contains as many different races of people Mr. Farnsworth's pictures offered a variety that greatly added to the fascination of the lecture.

RAILROADS BOW TO RATE RULING

WASHINGTON, Feb. 25.—As a result of the surrender of the Pennsylvania Railroad to the Interstate Commerce Commission it is now regarded as probable that the railroads will take no concerted action to fight the decisions in the rate cases.

Doubt was expressed to-day by those who have been most familiar with these cases as to the railroads taking any further action in the matter, such as appealing from the commission's decision to the newly-instituted Court of Commerce.

When the Pennsylvania notified the commission that it would not appeal from the findings the belief was expressed that all other carriers would act in like manner soon.

However, it is likely that the Interstate Commerce Commission's findings will result in a definition by the Supreme Court of the powers of the new Commerce Court.

Members of Congress believe that the railroads will attempt to carry at least one test case up, if only for this purpose.

In any event the carriers will not be able to go into court before March 10, as no order will be issued by the commission until that date.

The Interstate Commerce Commission to-day suspended until September 15 next proposed advances in coal and coke rates over the Baltimore & Ohio, Chesapeake & Ohio, and Norfolk & Western railroads. It also suspended until June 28 the advances in rates on milk, cream and milk products over the Baltimore & Ohio Southwestern, and advances in rates on vehicles on 624 railroads and steamship lines in the Southwest & Central Freight Association territory. Advances of rates on grain products over the Northern Pacific and sixteen other railroads in the Middle West were suspended until July 1.

Hearings on suspensions of schedules cancelling through rates over the St. Louis Southwestern railroad and two hundred other roads operating in the Middle West and Southwest were postponed by the commission until June 1.

T. H. RUSSELL, VETERAN HUB LAWYER, DEAD

Thomas H. Russell of the law firm of Russell, Moore & Russell, the oldest member of the Boston bar and the senior member, as well as a founder of the Boston Bar Association, is dead at his home, No. 3 St. James avenue. He was in his ninety-first year. The funeral announcement will be made later. Mr. Russell was born in Princeton, this State. He was graduated from Harvard College with the class of 1843 and from the Harvard Law School two years later.

MAY WHEAT AT ITS LOWEST MARK

CHICAGO, Feb. 25.—May wheat touched its lowest price shortly after the opening this morning. The market was ¼ to ⅜ cents lower all around, with commission houses the best sellers and scattered pit shorts and others on the buying side. All outside markets showed losses. The buying was on a small scale on resting orders. Liverpool, following the upturn here yesterday, was one of the leading causes for the drop here. Liverpool closed ⅜d. lower.

KNIGHTS CELEBRATE.

The Knights of St. John the Baptist held a jollification party in Somerville last night in honor of the victory by Company C in the prize drill held in Cambridge a few weeks ago. Captain M. G. Sullivan of the winning company, with his staff of officers, received the guests. An enjoyable evening was spent in dancing by the 125 couples present. The event was one of the prettiest social affairs held in Somerville during the past season.

AUTO MEN WANT LOWER FINES

By J. C. KERRISON.

The Automobile Legal Association requests its 1,200 members to urge upon their Representatives in the State Legislature the necessity and value of the enactment of the proposed light bill now before the Legislature that it may be enacted at this session. The association feels that such a measure means much to the safety, not only of the motorists, but of every one who uses the highways at night. Another measure in which the association is interested is that whereby it will be possible for the justices of the several courts to impose a minimum fine of $1 for violation of the motor vehicle laws where it is shown that the violation was but technical. At the present time the minimum fee is $10.

The latest from the A. L. A. is contained in a warning to its members which says:

"The police of Boston have not ceased their prosecution of automobilists, and frequently change their traps, but at the present time are operating traps as follows:

"Beacon street, from Charles to Massachusetts avenue, and from Mountfort street to Audubon circle.

"Boylston street, from Park square to Arlington street.

"Columbus avenue from the Back Bay station to the Ball Grounds.

"Commonwealth avenue, from Arlington street to Massachusetts avenue, and between Massachusetts avenue and the Hotel Buckminster.

"Massachusetts avenue, opposite Hotel Trafalgar to Westland avenue.

"Tremont street, from Park street to Keith's Theatre; and from the Hotel Touraine to and including Eliot street.

The coming automobile show is bound to bring thousands to Boston, and to make this city for a week, at least, the centre of the American automobile industry. All of the hotels in the Back Bay districts are at a loss to know what to do with their expected guests, as every available room has been reserved for many days, and hardly a mail goes out but what it carries with it announcements that rooms cannot possibly be reserved, as there are none that will be vacant. The indications are that the greatest crowd of experts that has ever attended a Boston show will be here during that week. Even the down-town hotels have commenced to feel the effects of the coming show, as all of them have had unprecedented requests for room reservations.

General Sales Manager E. C. Godfrey of the Dorian Remountable Rim Company of New York was in this city yesterday making arrangements for the establishment of a Boston agency. Mr. Godfrey was in consultation with one of the best known local accessory experts and it is probable that he will within the next few days make an announcement regarding this well-known rim. The Dorian remountable has attracted no end of attention at the big motor shows of the past two years and it will be shown most prominently at the show in Mechanics Building next week.

WELLESLEY CAT CASE IN COURT

The war to stop the killing of cats for dissecting purposes at Wellesley College went on again with renewed energy, led by Chief Harold Brown of the Natick police. John Squires, the Wellesley College janitor, was in the Natick court charged with stealing one cat valued at $500.

Chief Brown says he intends to ask for a summons for Professor Albert T. Morse, teacher of anatomy at Wellesley. Chief Brown also interviewed Frank D. Woods, superintendent of grounds at Wellesley, for whom Squires works. According to Chief Brown, Squires admits stealing cats and says he was ordered to do it by Superintendent Woods.

The Wellesley College teachers admit that they have bought about seventy-five cats every year and killed them for use in demonstrating anatomy to the girl students. So far as they know, they say, the cats were bought and not stolen.

Always Paid for C

Superintendent Woods declares that the cats were always bought and paid for. He denies that he told Squires ever to steal a cat.

When Dean Pendleton of the college was asked what would be done by the college authorities when the warrant was served on Squires, she said: "We have never investigated the manner in which the cats brought to us were collected. Now we shall make an investigation, and if we find that the collector has been stealing them, he must suffer. If we find that he was within his rights, we shall defend him."

John Squires, the janitor, stands charged, according to the warrant issued by Judge Henry C. Mulligan of the Natick Police Court, with the larceny of one cat, the property of Elmer Bent of No. 89 Pond street, Natick, and valued at $500.

In an interview with an AMERICAN reporter, Chief Brown said:

"The cat in question is a large white cat with black spots. The animal is valued by Mrs. Bent because it is a trick cat and will do almost anything it is told to do.

"I went to the college and had a talk with Squires. He confessed that he had been stealing cats in this town and also confessed that he had stolen this cat in particular. This is common larceny. It is no joke. It is a grievous offence, and I am highly indignant.

Says Squires Confessed.

"Squires admitted to me that he had stolen as high as seven cats in one day. His method was to come here in a carriage with a big bag like a gunny sack. He would chase cats in broad daylight. He generally paid a boy to hold his horse while he did the chasing. When he caught the cat he put it in his bag and drove rapidly off.

"One day a woman saw him chase one of her cats outside her house. She opened the window and yelled at him, asking why he was chasing her cat. Squires answered that he thought it was a stray cat, that he was taking it to the Rescue League. She reprimanded him, and Squires didn't get the cat.

"Mrs. Bent has been crying ever since the discovery of her loss. The family thought very highly of this cat and are willing to give anything to get even its dead body back. It has been dissected, however.

"These cats are kept in a barn in the college grounds. There are several cats still alive in this barn. I am waiting to have them identified, and if they are identified I shall get additional warrants against Squires.

Never Encourages Stealing.

"Prof. Albert P. Morse, teacher of anatomy at Wellesley, for whom the cats were obtained, is another for whom I feel that I should get a warrant, charging him with receiving stolen property. I went to Judge Henry C. Mulligan and obtained a warrant for Squires, then I notified him by telephone.

"While I was at Wellesley I talked to Fred D. Woods, superintendent of the grounds at Wellesley, for whom Squires works. Mr. Woods says that he never told Squires to steal any cats. He says that he directed Squires, if he was positive the cat had no owner to take it in, but if it had an owner to pay a small price for it. Squires, on the other hand, says that Woods told him to get them any way he could."

FIRST STRIKE IN CARPENTERS' FIGHT

The first strike resulting from the dispute led up to the suspension of twenty-seven carpenters' unions and two steamfitters and helpers' locals from the building trades' department of the Boston Central Labor Union was declared to-day at the new building being erected for the telephone company by Wells Brothers at Fort Hill Square. Twenty-eight carpenters and steamfitters were called out because Wells Brothers employed members of the Sheet Metal Workers' Union.

FRANKLIN SQUARE HOUSE FUND $67,512

Dr. George L. Perin of the Franklin Square House reports that an additional $4,293 has been subscribed to the fund which is being raised to pay for the property of the corporation. This brings the total subscribed up to $67,512. At least $100,000 is needed. No payment on subscriptions will be asked until the whole amount is pledged, but Dr. Perin is hopeful that this can be accomplished within a short time.

MISS ELLEN F. PENDLETON

BOYLSTON ST.? NO, FROG LANE

When Mrs. Suburban Shopper tells Mr. Suburban Shopper that dinner is late because there was such a crowd in Turn Again Alley that she just couldn't get to the subway in time for an early car, Mr. Suburban Shopper will look at her in surprise. Then she will have to explain that Turn Again Alley is the old name, just revived and signboarded, of Temple place.

Boylston street promenaders will soon be walking along Frog Lane when the signboards giving the old-time designations of many of Boston's streets are placed directly under the present names, by order of James H. Sullivan of the public works department. Mr. Sullivan is working in co-operation with a committee from the local chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution, which organization is anxious that the ancient names of some of Boston's thoroughfares be perpetuated.

Soon High street signboards will also bear the old designation of "Cow Lane" and other of the busiest down-town streets will be known as "Beer Alley," "Blackhorse Lane," "Paddy's Alley" and "Hog Lane."

400 CHICAGO PHONE WORKERS TO STRIKE

CHICAGO, Feb. 25.—More than 400 union employes of the Chicago Telephone Company will go on strike Monday as a result of the discharge of twenty-five linemen recently and the company's refusal to reintsate them. Should the company reinstate the men, the strike will be called off. It would affect all the linemen, installers and "trouble shooters"

ROBIN IS EXAMINED AS TO HIS SANITY

NEW YORK, Feb. 25.—Joseph G. Robin, the bank wrecker, underwent a final examination at the hands of four alienists to-day in an attempt to determine his sanity. The examination was held behind closed doors in the district attorney's office. Robin goes to trial on Monday before Justice Seabury, and his attorney, former District Attorney Jerome, made the move for the sanity inquiry to gain what strength he could to support his contention that Robin is crazy.

TICKLED TO DEATH BY DIET OF NAILS

UXBRIDGE, Feb. 25.—Tickling of the heart and too much ballast are the causes of the death of an Ayrshire cow owned by Alpheus M. Seagrave of Sleepy Hollow, which died before a vetrinary arrived. The autopsy disclosed four eight-penny wire nails in the animal's stomach. One was tickling the membrance of the heart. It is believed that the nails got into ensilage.

DISTURBS CHURCH, PAYS FINE OF $5

Enni MacCarthy of Wellesley was fined $5 by Judge Emory Grover in the Dedham District Court for creating a disturbance in St. John's Church, Wellesley, Sunday morning. A question as to his sanity was raised, but physicians who examiend him during the week pronounced him sane. He paid the fine.

ADDRESS BY RABBI.

Rabbi Charles Fleischer will speak at 7:30 to-morrow evening to the Spiritualists of Boston at Unity Church, Jordan Hall. His subject will be "The Spirit." The meeting has been arranged by Rev. F. A. Wiggin, pastor of the church, and it is expected that there wil be a large attendance.

BREAKS BACK BY FALL.

Jeremiah Landy, fifty-six, of No. 8 Nashua street, Somerville, employed as a seaman on the coal barge Upton, lying at the wharf at No. 278 Albany street, fell from the pilot house to the deck, a distance of ten feet, and sustained a fracture of the spine. He was taken to the City Hospital. He is not expected to recover.

TELLS US HOW TO GET RID OF BAD COLDS AND GRIPPE IN FEW HOURS.

You can surely end Grippe and break up the most severe cold either in head, chest, back, stomach or limbs in taking a dose of Pape's Cold Compound every two hours, until three consecutive doses are taken.

It promptly relieves the most miserable neuralgia pains, headache, dullness, head and nose stuffed up, feverishness, sneezing, sore throat, mucous catarrhal discharges, running of the nose, soreness, stiffness and rheumatic twinges.

Take this harmless Compound as directed, without interference with your usual duties and with the knowledge that there is no other medicine made anywhere else in the world which will cure your cold or end Grippe misery as promptly and without any other assistance or bad after-effects as a 25-cent package of Pape's Cold Compound, which any druggist in the world can supply.

Pape's Cold Compound is the result of three years' research at a cost of more than fifty thousand dollars, and contains no quinine, which we have conclusively demonstrated is not effective in the treatment of colds or grippe.

VOTE SELLING IS ADMITTED

NEW BEDFORD, Feb. 25.—Leading citizens of this city to-day declare in interviews with reporters for the AMERICAN that charges by Boston Common of wholesale vote buying and amazingly rotten political and moral conditions here are true. They admit these conditions have been known to them and to the city in general for more than a dozen years but that they have become hopeless of ever seeing them bettered.

Mayor Ashley denies the charges. So does Chief of Police Mason. On the other hand, Thomas Thompson, a former Mayor and a wealthy business man, asserts the charges are true. Collector of the Port Rufus A. Soule, wealthy manufacturer and former president of the State Senate, says the charges of wholesale vote buying are true. The Rev. James I. Bartholomew says the charges are old, but true.

Citizens, who are anxious to see the good name of New Bedford cleared, point to the fact that no finding of the result of the inquest into conditions here held by Judge Milliken in 1909 has been made, so far as they are aware. They say that at that inquest four men, at least, admitted having sold their votes.

Pastor Reiterates Charges.

A defiant and detailed denial of some of the charges made in Boston Common that Mayor Ashley of this city was a beneficiary and participated in wholesale vote buying, and that the city is politically and morally corrupt, was made to the AMERICAN by Mayor Ashley to-day. At the same time some of the charges were reiterated to the AMERICAN by the Rev. James I. Bartholemew, a prominent Methodist clergyman and pastor of St. James's Church.

"They have nothing on me; let them come on," is the burden of Mayor Ashley's defiance. "I am anxious to see these abominations abated," says the Rev. Mr. Bartholemew.

"Come On," Says Mayor.

"It may be that they are coming at me again," said the Mayor, when asked by the AMERICAN reporter for his answer to the arraignment. "If so, let them come. They have done it before, and what did they make out of it?

"They are the same old lot of opponents and they are evidently behind the article in Boston Common, referring to New Bedford politics.

FILENE SINGERS GIVE CONCERT

A remarkably interesting concert was given in Steinert Hall last evening by young people employed in Filene's Department Store, who form the F. C. A. Choral Society of which Elmer H. Manning, is director and Cazneau Litchfield is accompanist. The program included concerted numbers and choruses, including both classic and modern works. Solos were given by Gertrude C. Kleist, Raymond J. Ott, Irving Hobbs and others. Many of the participants possessed excellent voices which were well trained, and the concerted pieces went with a precision that would have done credit to more ancient and ambitious organizations.

PLENTY OF FUN AT HOOK NIGHT

Columbia Theatre amateur night provided the usual amount of fun. The crop of performers was good, bad and indifferent, the former getting applause and the usual shower of coins, while the latter got the hook. Several new tricks were pulled on the unwary victims, and many of them were glad when the ordeal was over, as they got it from both the front and rear. Peter Dooley, an Irish Come-all-ye-singer, won first prize by a wide margin, while the Dellea brothers, newsboy singers carried off second honors.

FATHER J. V. TRACY PRIEST 25 YEARS

Without any ceremony the Rev. Dr. Joseph V Tracy, P. R., of St. Columbkille's Church, Brighton, celebrated the twenty-fifth anniversary of his ordination to the priesthood. Only a few of the parishioners knew that it was their pastor's silver jubilee, but those who did called to pay their respects and wish him many happy returns of the day. Father Tracy was graduated from Boston College in 1882. His first pastorate in this diocese was at St. Anthony's Church, Allston. In 1907, on the death of Fr. Rossi, he was transferred from the Allston church to Brighton, and made permanent rector of St. Columbkille's parish.

YALE DISCOVERS A TUTORS' TRUST

NEW HAVEN, Feb. 25.—The existence of a tutoring "trust" at Yale among the student body is charged by the Yale Daily News, which says: "Not so very long ago it was possible for a number of men in a class to make their way wholly or in part through college by tutoring. The patronage then was well divided up, varying according to the ability of the individual tutor. At the present time attempts are being made to corral all tutoring work and to confine it within narrow circles, to which few have access."

LORIMER'S FRIENDS ARE MUCH WORRIED

WASHINGTON, Feb. 25.—Friends of Senator Lorimer are worrying to-day. Though confident that they could secure his vindication if the bribery case were brought ot a vote, the extended filibuster waged by his foes is threatening to prevent a vote at this session. Though an effort to obtain a unanimous consent agreement for a vote as late as next Wednesday, three days prior to the expiration of the present session of Congress, has failed in the Senate, the Senators friendly to Mr. Lorimer have made some progress by having the resolution declaring the seat of the junior Senator from Illinois vacant made the unfinished business of the Senate.

EXPLODE 2 BOMBS IN CHICAGO PLANT

CHICAGO, Feb. 25.—Two bombs, believed to have been the result of labor troubles, were exploded in the new plant of the Iroquois Iron Company at East Ninety-third street and the lake front early to-day. Several thousand dollars damage was done and windows for blocks were shattered by the shocks. The company recently had trouble with workmen and the police to-day are seeking two men who were seen hanging around the works yesterday and last night. The explosions caused a panic in South Chicago.

Reds Will Win Pennant if Cubs' Pitchers Fail to "Come Back"

By Hugh S. Fullerton

CINCINNATI.

Number of players on roll, 41.
Number of Cincinnati veterans, 18.
Probable lineup:
Catchers—McLean and Clarke.
Pitchers—McQuillan, Moren, Suggs, Fromme and Gaspar.
First base—Hoblitzell.
Second base—Egan.
Shortstop—Altizer or Downey.
Third base—Grant.
Outfielders—Beck, Mitchell, Bates, Bescher and Altizer.
To select from—Moore, Newman, Corcoran, Esmond, Breen, Baxter, Daugherty, Hinrichsen, Keefe, Meinke, Noogan, Schreiber, Black, Severoid, Wickland and Barter.

At last.

About a million years ago Cincinnati had a real baseball club. Now, after many years, it has another.

The Reds this season are certainly third—at least a one-two-three club—and from the figures a team that is a shade better than New York in hitting, much better on the bases, and more than its equal in fielding. I believe the Reds can beat New York out in the final fight—and the question of the pennant this year appears to me to be whether the Cub pitchers can come back. Chicago still has a better club than either of the rivals who are now threatening to take the pennant honors, but whether they will play ball up to their standard is another question. If they do not, I think both the Reds and Giants will pass them and that the Reds will be the pennant winners.

Signs point strongly to a general desire in the National League for Cincinnati to be among the contenders for the championship for Herrmann to win, and a greater thing for Herrmann to win, and a greater thing for him to beat out New York and Chicago in a hot three-cornered fight.

Weak Spots Strengthened.

The trade with Philadelphia made Cincinnati the Cubs' strongest rivals. Cincinnati was vitally weak in three places last season—at short, at third and on the slab. Otherwise the team was strong, consistent and even brilliant and the most dangerous team in the league in a batting rally. All last season the Reds scored their runs in bunches, and this season the team looks even more dangerous in that regard.

With the pitchers, third base and shortstop still weak, the Reds had not a chance. Philadelphia, in a remarkable trade, presented them with Grant, one of the best third basemen in the country and McQuillan, who, when in condition, is a great pitcher. Also Moren but Moren and McQuillan ought to be separated, for the chances are they would continue their joyful career instead of pitching. McQuillan has promised to be good, but—oh, would it not be fine to have Larry McLean, McQuillan and Moren start all together?

Not satisfied with that, Boston slipped the Reds Fred Beck, a corking hitter and a very good outfielder who can play first base almost well enough for any one. Griffith thinks he has the hole at shortstop plugged. He has McMillan, a fast and flighty youth who can throw away twice as many games as he can win; Dare Devil Dave Altizer and Downey. I don't think short is filled.

Infield Shy of Brains.

Downey is a very decent sort of a ball player, but light. McMillan won't do and Altizer is one of the puzzles of baseball. Every club that ever owned him was glad to say farewell to him. They enjoyed him, Comiskey did until Dave let three men score on a single to right field while he held the ball. The two leagues are full of stories of his thinking. But last year he went to Minneapolis and set the association afire, playing as great ball as any one ever saw, and he hit wonderfully. If I were Griffith I'd instruct Altizer not to take his head too near the Brunswick-Balke-Collender Company's factory or Willie Hoppe and Demarest may use it for a billiard ball.

The team on paper ought to be first or second in club hitting, first in club base running and about third in fielding, possibly fourth. That is, on the material in sight. I figure the team, as it probably will start, figures about .268 in hitting, which I think will be close to the top. Grant, Bates and Altizer will lift it if they hit anywhere near last season's clip.

McQuillan, if Right, a Star

Larry McLean naturally is the best catcher and the best hitting catcher in the country. He never has behaved himself and attended to business. Clarke is a man well up to average. The pitching staff has been mediocre. What it needed was one pitcher who could be depended upon to pitch forty games and pick up the tough game in each series and win. McQuillan can do this if he will work and give his best efforts to the club. Suggs is a peculiar pitcher. He won twenty and lost twelve games last season, and the Reds are lucky to retain him, as he is more effective against Chicago and New York than against weaker clubs. McQuillan, when he was working right, was one of Chicago's bad spots, and with Suggs and McQuillan pitching as they are capable of pitching, Chance's team will have a hard time beating Cincinnati. The Reds, too, have a trick of hitting Brown pretty hard, and Pfiester hardly can work against them, so in a series the Reds appear to have a shade as against the Cubs on pitchers—always figuring all pitchers at or near their best.

Egan Is a Brainy Player.

Hoblitzel, at first, is a really great first baseman. He did not hit as hard last season as I thought he would, although .278 is pretty fair. I think he can and will do a shade better. Egan, the Reds' second baseman, is a player hardly appreciated by the public, because he does his work without show. Among players he is rated as one of the best second stackers in the country and a clever, brainy man. Altizer probably will play short until Griffith begins to froth at the mouth—then some one else will go in.

It is awful to think of Bates and Altizer in one outfield. One could get the equivalent of four tusks out of that bunch. I think Grif will have Mike Mitchell, Bates and Beck in the outfield.

To sum up, Cincinnati is strong in catchers, probably strong in pitchers, strong at first, second and third, doubtful to fair at shortstop, strong in the outfield, well fortified with experienced substitutes and has accumulated a lot of new talent. If it wins the pennant the team will win it on the bases, for in its present form it is easily the fastest team on the bases in the league and Griffith believes in running. The one drawback is lack of brains in some of the men—but Egan, Grant and Hoblitzel have plenty for the infield, and Mike Mitchell can think enough for the outfield.

Added Tip—Watch M. Mitchell hit if this team starts pennantward.

ALL-AMERICANS PUT IT OVER NATIONALS

HOT SPRINGS, Ark., Feb. 25.—The best game of the season thus far was between the All-American and the All Nationals, the former winning by 4 to 3. The star player of the game was Walter Johnson, Washington's premier pitcher, who landed on the ball for a home run, his second this season.

The conditions were ideal for gingerly ball-playing, and the players exhibited plenty of pepper, the air being chilly enough to make them hop about lively. Crawford and Delehanty figured in two double plays. The batteries were: Fromme, Otey, Land and Elliot; Walker, Clarke, McQuillan, Stanage and Hackett.

JACK JOHNSON TO QUIT RING

LONDON, Feb. 24. Naughton, Examiner, San Francisco: Will give six thousand pounds Johnson Langford, London or Paris, May, June, cut 60 and 40; Corri referee. Will you arrange Johnson?

HUGH M'INTOSH.

By W. W. NAUGHTON.

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 25.—"If I can't get my price I'll retire from the ring within six months. And when I retire I'll stay retired. There will be no getting me to come back to regain the supremacy of the black race."

This is, in part, what Jack Johnson said to-day while turning down Hugh D. McIntosh's offer of a purse of $30,000 for a fight with Sam Langford in either Paris or London.

"I do not understand McIntosh," continued Johnson. "He gave Tommy Burns six thousand pounds, or $30,000, to box me in Australia, and I, who won the fight, received $5,000. I informed McIntosh some time ago that I would require as much as Burns received if I was wanted to defend my championship. Surely, if he could afford to give Burns $30,000 in Sydney he can offer me an equal amount to box in a big city like Paris or London.

"Another thing, even if my demand is met, I'll insist on an American referee. Eugene Corri is all right, but I want a countryman of mine in the ring when I fight abroad again, and, rely upon it, they will not change my mind on this point. I took the stand that I would name the referee in the fight with Jeffries, and they laughed at me; but when the time came Tex Rickard, who was my selection, filled the position.

"Now, as to Langford. I beat him once, but let that go. He professes to be very anxious to meet me and talks as though there would be no difficulty in beating me. But he wants almost as much money as I expect. When I was after the championship I sacrificed everything. I accepted small amounts of money, and consoled myself with the thought that they would not be able to keep me from winning the championship. I was looking ahead all the time and making up my mind that when I got on top of the ladder I would treat others just as I had been treated.

"I'm on top now, and I'm not asking a cent more than was asked by the champions who went before me. Langford, if he thinks he could beat me, would not be looking for a 40 per cent. cut. Let him take a chance, the same as I did. I know I can beat him, but I want to be paid well for doing it.

"I don't have to fight and I will not change my demands. Contrary to reports, I have saved my money and have enough to live on. Why, I gave up six weeks' theatrical work that would have brought me $2,000 a week to come out here and enjoy automobiling in the balmy Spring weather."

"Supposing all your demands are met, when would you be ready to fight?" was asked.

"I could get ready easily by June, and for that matter I'm in good shape now. I feel as though I could lick a cage full of lions, but, of course, I would want the usual grind of road work and sparring to toughen my muscles and make my wind good."

THE BOSTON WISE MEN FAILED TO be attracted by the country-wide tip upon T. M. Green, and went to him in no appreciable numbers, declaring that the distance was too far for him. The judgment proved most excellent, for word came early that Green had only finished second, and was a very tired horse at the finish.

TOM McCARTHY TELLS ME THAT Walter Lewis, the young Boston catcher, who will be seen with the Lawrence Club this season, has all the earmarks of a very promising receiver, and should surely make good. Tom says this boy can hit a few, has a good wing and is up to date in getting his man at the plate. With all this in his favor, in the way of commendation from Tom, the boy should be able to deliver the goods.

IT LOOKS AS IF YOUNG DYSON would rule as good as 2 to 1 in the betting, in his bout with Al Delmont of this city, at the Rhode Island A. C. in Thornton next Monday night. The boys should come pretty near settling who is the featherweight champion of New England, as the result of their fifteen-round encounter.

LOOK FOR A TERRIFIC BATTLE BEtween Frankie Conley and Johnny Coulon, tomorrow afternoon, which will go a long way in determining the best bantam in the country, and which is arousing the greater interest in the South than any battle between little men held in many years. It seems as if Conley had rather the stiffer wallop, but Coulon knows a bit more about the game, and their battle should be a lightning affair from the call of time. While the odds favor Conley, it right sure looks as if Coulon was the best short end of the season.

MY FIRST RIDE UPON THE SNOW path this Winter was behind J. H. Richardson's (Little Rich) trotter Chain Shot, 2:06½, who is now seventeen years old. Coming down Beacon street, along the road, the old fellow heard the pounding of footsteps in his wake, and let out a link that was indeed good to ride behind. Chain Shot was one of the best in his day, and he still can go a merry brushing clip that makes him an ideal roadster upon the snow.

PRESIDENT A. M. JOHNSON AND A party of twenty-five members of the Dorchester Gentlemen's Driving Club journeyed down to the annual banquet of the Old Colony Driving Club at South Braintree, in an old-fashioned boat sleigh, and had a splendid drive upon the snow-path. The Old Colony boys had a rousing banquet and gave the visitors a splendid reception, and the evening proved one long to be remembered.

CUT HOLY CROSS BASEBALL SQUAD

WORCESTER, Feb. 25.—The first cut in the baseball squad at Holy Cross is made to-day by Coach W. F. Dyer. The number of men who have reported is too large for the work indoors, and the squad of fifty is therefore reduced to thirty. None of the battery men who have reported are dropped, and the infield men, all of whom have shown up well, remain, but the number of outfielders is so large that the coach feels that a cut is advisable.

Of the new battery men who have reported, the fastest work is that shown by Kenney of Pittsfield, Drummey of Marlboro, and Rooney of Worcester for the catchers, and Dunn, G. Mahoney and Matthews for the pitchers. Lynch, who covered first base for the Williston team a year ago, is also a candidate for the box, but as he has made a good showing at the bat and as the present outlook is favorable for the pitchers, it is probable that he will return to his old stand at first base and fight it out there for the sack with Ostergren and Flannigan.

The two games that were scheduled with the Japs that are touring the country will probably be cancelled entirely as the plans that were made for them are not materializing.

The varsity team will take the trip to New York State next month, and will play Lafayette, Manhattan and Seton Hall. The first game on the schedule will be played against Georgetown on Patriots' day in Worcester. Negotiations are still on with Brown for one of the open dates; the other two will not be filled until the middle of the season.

SUGDEN WILL HELP TRAIN THE TIGERS

NEW CASTLE, Pa., Feb. 25.—Joseph Sugden, catcher for the Pittsburg National League club during the 90's, and manager of the local team of the Ohio and Pennsylvania League, will accompany the Detroit American League team to the South and assist in the training of that team's catchers.

The All-Halifax seven, victors in their rink battle here with the M. I. T. team, tackles the Boston Hockey Club to-night at the Boston Arena, confident that they will triumph over the local team as easily as they did over the college boys. To-night's game will be a big international match that is sure to draw a great crowd to the Arena.

The Halifax players did not extend themselves against the Tech boys till they were forced to in order to win out. They underestimated the classy M. I. T. seven, but when they put on their real burst of speed there was nothing to it. The score was 6 to 4.

The Maritime champs looked easy compared with the fast Boston bunch, but after the contest with Tech the experts are in the air picking the probable winner of to-night's game.

The Nova Scotians have held two star men back for the game to-night in Ball and Hay, a couple of the best defence men in Canada. The rest of the team may feel the effects of the hard struggle with Tech.

Captain Winsor of the Boston seven has strengthened his team and will have several high-class players ready to jump into the regulars' places if they show any signs of not playing their top game. Huntington, the best Harvard player, is likely to get into the clash and will have a chance to shine as he did for the Crimson this season.

Townsend will be the only veteran missing, but his position on the forward line will be taken by Sortwell, the snappy Harvard freshman rusher, so there will be no break in the combination play of the crack organization.

The Boston hockey fans are confident that the local team will again triumph as it did in the contest with Sherbrooke, and thereby reap more international honors. It's a supreme test for the home seven as the game is to go for twenty-five minute halves, a distance that is rather long for American players, but which the Canadians are used to.

The victory of the Nova Scotia team has set their many followers in this part of the country wild with enthusiasm, and they want to see their pet team make a cleanup before leaving for home. One of the biggest demonstrations ever seen at a hockey game in this city is likely to be witnessed, judging from the racket made by the Canadians on the opening night of the doubleheader.

GAINES AND LEFAVOR ON QUINCY R. A. CARD

The Quincy Rowing Association has secured Jerry Gaines, the market champion, to meet Bob Lefavor of Brockton in a ten-round bout of an all-star show next Thursday night. Gaines has been resting up for three months with an injured hand, but he says it is as good as ever now, and that Mr. Lefavor will find it out Thursday night.

Kid Goodman and Johnny Glover, who box the final bout of ten rounds, are sure to furnish a fast contest. Their other bout at Bangor, Me., was the fastest contest ever witnessed in that city, and as this match is for a decision and a longer distance, neither man will have any complaint to make if he is ajudged the loser.

NIXON AND SCALER IN PORTLAND BOUT

Billy Nixon of Cambridge and Kid Scaler of Spokane, Washington, who put up such a sensational ten-round battle at the Hyde Park A. C. two weeks ago, have been rematched to box at Bartley Connolly's club at Portland, Me., Saturday, evening, March 4.

N. E. LEAGUE TO OPEN APRIL 24

The New England League season will open on April 24 and will close September 9. The schedule, which was adopted at a meeting of the magnates in this city, calls for 126 games, each team playing nine games at home and nine abroad.

A committee was appointed, consisting of Jesse Burkett, Worcester; Louis P. Pieper, Lawrence, and J. J. Gray, Lowell, to report on the selection of an official ball for next season. The members adopted an amendment to the constitution requiring that the president, manager and treasurer of each club join in a statement twice a month giving a list of players under contract and their salaries, failure to do which is punishable by a fine of $25 for each day of offence. It was voted also that no player may participate in more than five games before signing a contract.

In the absence of President Timothy H. Murnane, D. F. Clohecy of Haverhill presided. Other present were: Brockton, John W. McCune; Fall River, Manager J. H. O'Brien; Worcester, Jesse Burkett, J. J. O'Donnell; Lowell, J. J. Gray, Andrew F. Roche; Lawrence, Louis Pieper, J. P. Sullivan; New Bedford, James Shank; Lynn, E. B. Fraser, Frank B. Leonard.

CUT IN HARVARD BASEBALL SQUAD

Although Coach Sexton has reduced the baseball squad at Harvard to fifty-two players, the squad will be again swelled to an unwieldy size on Monday when the men who won their varsity "H", or played on the second or freshman teams of last year will report for the first time this season. It is probable that Coach Sexton will again cut the squad early next week.

The players retained includes the men out for positions in the outfield, infield and all of the battery candidates.

Work has been progressing rapidly under Coach Sexton and it has been found necessary to have a smaller squad to work with. Both batting and fielding work is being tried each afternoon in the baseball cage and the new coach expects to have his men in good shape in time for the opening of the outdoor season, which will begin as soon as the weather permits.

Business Success Through Publicity

No. 62

Half a Million From Advertised Sausages

Any one who has desirable goods, common sense, energy and persistency has a gilt-edged investment at hand.

A good selling plan, backed by persistency, will market anything that is desirable. In some isolated instances even the farmer has been able by trade-marking his products to reap a fortune.

On a small agricultural paper in the Middle West some years ago there was a man who became interested in a small farm outside of the town in which he lived. He was more or less of an invalid, and finally he went back to the farm with a business idea in his head, looked over his pigs and then made up his mind to convert them into an investment. He proceeded to make sausages and in a small way to advertise them, selling them direct from the farm to the household. The sausages were the best that could be put up. His market grew.

His advertising was permeated with common-sense suggestions of the wholesomeness of his sausages. As his business grew his advertising increased. His sausages now are known to almost every first-class dealer and hundreds of thousands of consumers.

To-day he is reputed to be worth over half a million, and the wealthiest man in his section. In New York two leading grocers carry his sausages and feature them among their choicest food stuffs.

If you should ask him what lay at the bottom of his success he would tell you, "In the first place the best goods packed and shipped honestly, and secondly, a persistent, effective sales plan in the shape of advertising."

Advertising is the modern solution of the problem of distribution. It oils the channels of salesmanship. By it one can market any kind of a desirable commodity. It is the quickest and most effective way of reaching a market.

Newspaper advertising is just like intensive farming—it's the cultivation of a local market most carefully and effectively. It goes into the highways and byways, rich homes and poor homes, day in and day out. Let the local newspaper tell your story to the local market. The New England field is one of the richest in the country.

The Boston American will reach that field in the most effective way. It has a larger circulation than any other newspaper in Greater Boston. The largest department stores use it, and you will find it advantageous in selling your goods.

Billy Nixon of Cambridge, athletic instructor, boxer, adviser to several amateur athletic organizations; won the New England amateur boxing championship in the 115-pound class in 1908, under management of John J. McGann, popular Boston sportsman; member of several athletic organizations; trainer of prominent athletes; possible lightweight champion; identified with indoor sports for years; as lightweight boxer won from Biz Mackay, Dufresne, Franklin, Sealer, Ryan and Howard Smith; single; lives in Cambridge.

BOWLERS FLOCKING TO BUFFALO MEET

BUFFALO, Feb. 25.—The National Bowling Association's annual tournament will begin to-night on the newly erected eighteen alleys of the Buffalo Bowling Company. Fully 10,000 visitors are expected within the next three weeks from all over America to take part in and to witness the games. From every part of the East and the Middle West scores of clubs are entered; 715 two-men teams and 1,451 in the individual classes will compete for a prize list of $19,045.

Mayor Louis P. Fuhrmann and Chief of Police Regan will hurl the balls down the alleys for the first time, and a woman, Miss Littlefield of Brooklyn, the champion bowler of her sex in the world, will also be seen in exhibitions tonight, as well as starting off the sport.

ADDIE JOSS'S ARM O. K. DECLARES WHITE

TOLEDO, O., Feb. 25.—That Addie Joss, Cleveland's star pitcher, will be as good as he ever was in his diamond career when the gong clangs on opening day, unless an unforseen accident happens, was the information imparted to-day by "Doc" White, the Naps' trainer.

White said the big fellow's arm trouble has been remedied, and that he will be able to pitch capably. Addie is happy over the outlook. He worried a lot this Winter, and while he made light of the matter, he really believed he would not be able to do much pitching next Summer.

CHATTANOOGA MUST THINK JESSE EASY

WORCESTER, Feb. 25.—Manager Jesse C. Burkett of the Worcester baseball club received in his mail to-day an offer from the Chattanooga club management to sell to the Worcester club three of the Tennesee team's twirlers, with the condition that the selling club may buy them back at the end of the season at the same price the Worcester club gave for them. Manager Burkett smiles at the offer, and says that he is not in the game to develop players for any organization under those conditions.

FOOTBALL PRACTICE AT HARVARD MAR. 27

Harvard's Spring football practice will begin at Soldiers Field March 27 and continue for three weeks. Captain Bob Fisher and Coach Haughton will have charge of the work of the candidates. It is expected that the majority of the players of the big freshman squad of last Fall will avail themselves of this opportunity to learn what is expected of them as members of the varsity squad.

MELROSE BEATS B. C. HIGH 16-1

Melrose High had an easy time in its hockey game with the Boston College seven this morning at the Cunningham rink, Milton, and won by the score of 16 to 1.

Clarence Wannamaker was in the game with all his speed and broke his own record for the number of goals made in a game. He scored nine of the sixteen goals and helped to score a couple of the others.

Mullen of the losing team shot the only goal for his team, and he would not have got that one if Choisson had been on his job.

The Melrose goal tender was away from his position, doing a little fooling on the side, and the Boston College player took the advantage.

The lineup:

Score—Melrose High, 16; Boston College High, 1. Goals—Made by C. Wannamaker, 9; Gately, 3; Hanson, 2; E. Wannamaker, Page, Mullen. Referee—Shea.

BROCKTON SEVEN QUITS WORCESTER

BROCKTON, Feb. 25.—Because of a disagreement over the use of a hall the Brockton Polo Club, a short time ago transferred to Worcester, will return to this city and play games at the Palace Rink during the remaining five weeks of the season. Owners Charles C. Fitzgerald and John W. McCue, who have conducted the affairs of the team since the season started, will manage the five here. The Brockton team was one of the fastest in the league, but because of poor support it received here it was found that a transfer to Worcester would be a wise move. Worcester supported the team, but the owners were unalbe to procure the hall on the nights they desired.

SHEVLIN TO AGAIN BOX HARRY POWERS

Eddie Shevlin of Roxbury and Harry Powers of Brooklyn have been rematched to box the feature bout of twelve rounds at the Unity Club of Lawrence next Thursday night. When the pair met at the same club a few weeks ago Shevlin was awarded the decision after twelve rounds of fast milling. The Brooklyn boy claims he injured his hand in the seventh round and would have surely won had it not been for the accident. The patrons of the Unity Club pronounced it the best bout they had seen in a long time and encouraged Jim Crilley to rematch them. Both Shevlin and Powers are big favorites in Lawrence. Tommy Murphy of Lawrence and Jimmy Quinlan of Danvers will meet in the semi-final.

NEW CANDIDATES FOR TUFTS TEAM

Baseball prospects at Tufts look brighter as a result of the three weeks of cage practice which has brought out all the veteran material. Three new candidates were out to-day—Elmer I. McPhee, the second team first baseman; Louis E. Mendelssohn, an English High pitcher, and A. N. Godfrey of Swampscott, a former Littleton player, who is an infield candidate.

500 AT TESTIMONIAL TO CAMBRIDGE BOXER

Joe Williams, a well-known local boxer, was tendered a testimonial at Institute Hall, East Cambridge, last night, which was attended by about 500. Those participating were: Charles "Sandy" Chapman, Delinor brothers, George Hardy, Joseph Silva and John McCarthy, Jack and Mike (Twin) Sullivan, Goodman and partner, and Domfale brothers.

CAMPBELL-RYAN IN 3-CUSHIONS

By ED COGSWELL.

There is a three-cushion billiard match at the New Boston room next Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday evenings that will attract the interest of the Boston enthusiasts in that style of billiards. Charley Campbell, former New England champion balkline player, meeting Jimmy Ryan, the champion three-cushion player of New England, for 150 points in blocks of fifty points each night.

Campbell has recently gone into three-cushions, it being his idea that anybody strong at balkline can make good at the angle game. Ryan has always been a topnotcher at three-cushions and at pool. There are some who believe he has a chance in going after such stars as John Daly, world's champion, in getting the title.

A. Taylor of the Brunswick-Balke-Collender Company is much pleased with the new billiard tables his company has placed in Jack Sheafe's Boylston room, three in number. However that may be, Sheafe is now devoting about all of his time in mastering the balkline game, the last report being that twice in one afternoon he made consecutive runs of three and five points, and in no instance has he failed more than eight trials in getting a shot.

There is a red-hot handicap billiard tournament going on at the Melrose Highlands Club with nineteen entries. Bill Plummer is now well in the lead for the trophy, but it is well to remember that Bill made it a point to be on hand when the handicapping was done by the committee and got in easy. Bill needs no guardian.

Manager Van Dyke of the Elite is patiently waiting for Moses Yatter to come over with that match at bank shots for $50 a side.

SAMMY KELLAR LOSES.

BALTIMORE, Feb. 25.—Young Britt of this city was given the decision over Sammy Kellar of London at the end of fifteen rounds before the Eureka A. C. Britt outfought the Englishman from start to finish. Kellar only avoided a knockout by cleverness, stalling and hugging.

GIANTS BATTLE IN FIRST GAME

DALLAS, Tex., Feb. 25.—The young Giants are in good shape for the opening game here to-day. The squad is in charge of McGraw. Those left behind are Hendricks, who has blisters on his heels, caused by new baseball shoes; Arlie Latham, Ernest Lush, who is too sore to play, and Pitcher Nagle, who must remain and take the hot baths for his arm, which is painfully stiff.

16 PLAYERS COMING HERE FROM PANAMA

HOLYOKE, Feb. 25.—Reports have been received from the Holyoke baseball club's scout, J. B. Burke, who is in Panama, that he would be able to send up sixteen good men, which with the few old players retained, will make a strong aggregation.

BROTHERS WIN BOUTS AT ARMORY

More surprises were sprung at the amateur boxing tournament at the Armory A. A. than at any amateur show held by the club in a long while. The big surprise of the night came when Bill Corrigan of the Riverside Boat Club defeated Ed Flynn, a Lynn lightweight in a special bout in the 135-pound class. Flynn has been coming along like a typhoon and was picked by most of the fans to put it over William.

Gilbert Gallant, the clever Chelsea 125-pounder, went through his field in a total of five rounds, one of his opponents happening to last a fraction of a second into the second round.

The Gurtsell family was there in great shape. Bob won from Joe Bradley, who had it all over him in weight, and William, boxing in the 145-pound class, scored a quick win over Jim Dooley.

Jack Bowen of Chelsea, who met James Burns of Worcester in one of the trial bouts in the 135-pound class, made a very quick exit from the ring before the first round was finished. While Burns was handing it to him fast and hard Bowen made a sudden rush for the side of the ring, jumped through the ropes and never stopped running till he got to his dressing room.

She Gave Him Her Answer

By KENNETT HARRIS

THE parents of the girl had worried a great deal about the matter. They had done all that parents could do to keep the two apart. They had forbidden the undesirable one to enter the house, which was foolish, and they had bullied the girl with parental tenderness, which was useless.

He was a handsome fellow, with an athletic figure not too bulky for grace. He had fine dark eyes and a soft, persuasive voice, and he was conscious of all these advantages.

So the hand that Eddie held had not been unresisting, and when he finished it was gently but decidedly withdrawn.

"I'm sorry, but it must be 'No,'" she said. "Please don't ask me why, but be sure that I mean it, and be sure that I am sorry. And now won't you go?"

"You don't seem to care how you hurt me," he burst out, indignantly. "I'll help you, then. It's because I haven't got any money."

"It is that, partly," she admitted.

"And because your father doesn't like me."

"That influences me, too," she said, her voice shaking a little.

"And that little brute, Davis, has got money and your father and mother both like him, the sneaking——"

"Don't say anything more like that, Eddie," she said in her decided tone. "If you do I shan't be sorry. He isn't a brute, and he's anything but sneaking."

"You can defend him if you want to," he cried, "but I know one thing: You don't love him, and you do love me. You can't deny it."

A Hard Rub for Eddie

She smiled a little at that. "I'm afraid you haven't got the situation correctly," she said. "But never mind that. I see you want me to speak plainly, so I'll tell you that it isn't just the money itself. It's that you have always been content to take money from your mother and accept all her other sacrifices without showing the least ambition to do anything for yourself.

"Don't be angry, Eddie, because you told the truth just now, partly. I am fond of you. Very fond of you, and I could easily grow fonder. It would be very sweet to love you and to let you love me, but I would pay too dearly for it."

"You could never count securely on anything, then," he protested. "Not on the sun rising and setting. I swear to you, Elise——"

"I'd rather you wouldn't," she said. "It won't do any good. Do you remember Miss Sutrie last Summer? The moment you saw her you forgot me, you forgot everything but her, and all that cured you was when you discovered she was engaged to a man that she adored. That hurt your vanity and you came back to me then."

And Eddie Went Back

"You are altogether mistaken about that," declared Eddie. "I can assure you ——"

"You mustn't think me too coldly calculating, too selfish; but I am not so foolish as to walk open-eyed into poverty and misery just to save myself a little temporary unhappiness. I shall forget you, as you will assuredly forget me. I shall most likely marry Jim Davis. I like him and I respect him. Good-bye, Eddie."

He made a somewhat theatrical gesture of despair and turned to the door. His hand was already on the knob when a sobbing cry from the sensible girl checked him.

"Oh, Eddie," she cried, "don't go away like that! I really didn't mean—Eddie, come back! If—if you're sure——"

And Eddie went back.

Advice to Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

NEEDS A HOME

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am a young man twenty-one years old, and am deeply in love with a young lady about a year my junior. I have only a high-school education, and my tastes are domestic in character.

She is a college girl and has always lived in a hotel, which I think has spoiled her taste for a home, as whenever I call on her she only seems to want to discuss literature and poetry, and I am not familiar with these topics and never know what to say.

B. H. F.

SHE would be much happier living in a home of her own than in a hotel, as she does now. She will get over talking on literary topics. Ask her outright to marry you, and I think you will receive a favorable answer.

NOT IN SOME CASES

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am a young man twenty-three years of age, and am deeply in love with a girl four years my senior. I have been going with this girl for the last two years and seem to love her very much and do not think I could give her up. Would you kindly advise me if you think she is too old for me? My people say she is too old.

J. S.

I HAVE known cases where as great a difference as you mention was no bar to the happiness of those concerned. It all depends on how much you love each other.

PROPERLY INTRODUCED

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

Having seen a girl on the street and walking as far as her home found out her name, I would like to get an introduction to her, but being unable to find anyone that knows her, would like to know if it would be well and proper if I write a letter to the girl explaining the circumstances and asking permission to call and introduce myself personally?

C. B.

BOTH the girl and her parents would probably take great offence if you wrote to her. If you cannot meet her properly you had better not meet her at all.

When girl troubles and the big REALLY troubles run you down (hold your little ear close, little girls who are hunting for ease for the hurt in your poor little heart), don't be 'shamed, and don't think your legs are too long; hunt out that wonderful, half-forgotten comfort of your mother's knee. Oh, how it helps! You're never too big; your mother always has room on her knees and in her heart.

The Mystery of the "Villa Rose"

One of the Greatest Mystery Stories Ever Written. By A. E. W. Mason. Copyright, 1909, 1910, by A. E. W. Mason

Synopsis of Preceding Instalments

Madame Camille Dauvray, elderly, rich and noted for her rare collection of jewels, has been found strangled in her salon, at the Villa Rose, at Lac Bourget, near Aix-les-Bains, France. Her maid, Helene Vauquier, is discovered bound and chloroformed in an upper room of the mansion. Celie Harland, a pretty young English woman, Madame's companion, who fled in a motor car, is suspected of the crime.

Hanaud, the great French detective, at the solicitation of Harry Wethermill and his friend, Julius Ricardo, undertake to solve the mystery. Wethermill, Celie's sweetheart, has known her since coming to Aix a few weeks before, and believes her innocent.

Helene, after recovering, tells the detective that Celie held seances and pretended to call up spirits and great women for Madame, to wean the latter away from fortune tellers.

On the night of the murder, a woman, called by Madame, Adele, a sceptic, calls to test the powers of Celie. Helene is told to retire, after dressing Celie for the seance, and understands that Adele's friend "will call for her later in a motor car."

Helene is awakened from sleep by Adele who binds her, while a man in a mask chloroforms her.

Hanaud discovers that the murderers had rifled Madame's safe, and, finding the jewels were not hidden there, ransacked the entire room. Hanaud himself finds the jewels hid in a secret cache under the floor.

Only a necklace and some rings are found missing and these Madame wore that evening.

CHAPTER VII.—(Continued)

AS for Harry Wethermill, he made no reply. His burning eyes were fixed upon Hanaud's face, and that was all. Hanaud, for his part, asked for no reply from him. Indeed, he did not look toward Harry Wethermill's face at all. Ricardo understood. Hanaud did not mean to be deterred by the suffering written there.

He went down again into the little gay salon lit with flowers and August sunlight, and stood beside the couch, gazing at it with troubled eyes. And, as he gazed, he closed his eyes and shivered. He shivered like a man who has taken a sudden chill.

Nothing in all this morning's investigations, not even the rigid body beneath the sheet, nor the strange discovery of the jewels, had so impressed Ricardo. For there he had been confronted with facts, definite and complete; here was a suggestion of unknown horrors, a hint, not a fact, compelling the imagination to dark conjecture. Hanaud shivered. That he had no idea why Hanaud shivered made the action still more significant, still more alarming. And it was not Ricardo alone who was moved by it. A voice of despair rang through the room. The voice was Harry Wethermill's, and his face was ashy white.

"Monsieur!" he cried, "I do not know what makes you shudder; but I am remembering a few words you used this morning."

Hanaud turned upon his heel. His face was drawn and grey and his eyes blazed.

"My friend, I am also remembering those words," he said. Thus the two men stood confronting one another, eye to eye, with awe and fear in both their faces.

Ricardo was wondering to what words they both referred, when the sound of wheels broke in upon the silence. The effect upon Hanaud was magical. He thrust his hands into his pockets.

"Helene Vauquier's cab," he said lightly. He drew out his cigarette case and lighted a cigarette.

Perrichet's Discovery

"Let us see that poor woman safely off. It is a closed cab, I hope."

It was a closed landau. It drove past the open door of the salon to the front door of the house. In Hanaud's wake they all went into the hall. The nurse came down alone carrying Helene Vauquier's bag. She placed it in the cab and waited in the doorway.

"Perhaps Helene Vauquier has fainted," she said anxiously; "she does not come." And she moved toward the stairs.

Hanaud took a singularly swift step forward and stopped her.

"Why should you think that?" he asked, with a queer smile upon his face, and as he spoke a door closed gently upstairs. "See," he continued, "you are wrong; she is coming."

Ricardo was puzzled. It had semed to him that the door which had closed so gently was nearer than Helene Vauquier's door. It seemed to him that the door was upon the first, not the second landing. But Hanaud had noticed nothing strange; so it could not be. He greeted Helen Vauquier with a smile as she came down the stairs.

"You are better, mademoiselle," he said politely. "One can see that. There is more color in your cheeks. A day or two and you will be yourself again."

He held the door open while she got into the cab. The nurse took her seat beside her; Durette mounted the box. The cab turned and went down the drive.

"Good-bye, mademoiselle," cried Hanaud, and he watched until the high shrubs hid the cab from his eyes.

Then he behaved in an extraordinary way. He turned and sprang like lightning up the stairs. His agility amazed Ricardo. The others followed upon his heels. He flung himself at Celie's door and opened it. He burst into the room, stood for a second, then ran to the window. He hid behind the curtain, looking out. With his hand he waved to his companions to keep back.

The sound of wheels creaking and rasping rose to their ears. The cab had just come into the road. Durette upon the box turned and looked toward the house. Just for a moment Hanaud leaned from the window, as Besnard the Commissaire, had done, and, like Besnard again, he waved his hand. Then he came back into the room and saw, standing in front of him, with his mouth open and his eyes starting out of his head, Perrichet—the intelligent Perrichet.

"Monsieur," cried Perrichet, "something has been taken from this room."

Hanaud looked round the room and shook his head.

"No," he said.

"But yes, monsieur," Perrichet insisted. "Oh, but yet. See! Upon this dressing-table there was a small pot of cold cream. It stood here, 'where my finger is,' when we were in this room an hour ago. Now it is gone."

Hanaud burst into a laugh.

"My friend Perrichet," he said ironically, "I will tell you the newspaper did not do you justice. You are more intelligent. The truth, my excellent friend, lies at the bottom of a well; but you would find it at the bottom of a pot of cold cream. Now let us go. For in this house, gentlemen, we have nothing more to do." He passed out of the room. Perrichet stood aside, his face crimson, his attitude one of shame. He had been rebuked. He knew it now. He had wished to display his intelligence—yes, at all costs he must show how intelligent he was. And he had shown himself a fool. He should have kept silence about that pot of cream.

CHAPTER VIII.

The Captain of the Ship.

HANAUD walked away from the Villa Rose in the company of Wethermill and Ricardo.

"We will go and lunch," he said.

"Yes; come to my hotel," said Harry Wethermill. But Hanaud shook his head.

"No; come with me to the villa des Fleurs," he replied. "We may learn something there; and in a case like this every minute is of importance. We have to be quick."

"I may come too?" cried Mr. Ricardo eagerly.

"By all means," replied Hanaud, with a smile of extreme courtesy. "Nothing could be more delicious than monsieur's suggestions"; and with that remark he walked on silently.

Mr. Ricardo was in a little doubt as to the exact significance of the words. But he was too excited to dwell long upon them. Distressed though he sought to be at his friend's grief, he could not but assume an air of importance. All the artist in him rose joyously to the occasion. He looked upon himself from the outside. He fancied without the slightest justification that people were pointing him out. "That man has been present at the investigation at the Villa Rose," he seemed to hear people say. "What strange things he could tell us if he would!"

And suddenly, Mr. Ricardo began to reflect. What, after all, could he have told them?

And that question he turned over in his mind while he ate his luncheon. Hanaud wrote a letter between the courses. They were sitting at a corner table, and Hanaud was in the corner with his back to the wall. He moved his plate, over the letter as he wrote it.

It would have been impossible for either of his guests to see what he had written, even if they had wished. Ricardo, indeed, did wish. He rather resented the secrecy with which the detective, under a show of openness, shrouded his thoughts and acts. Hanaud sent the waiter out to fetch an officer in plain clothes, who was in attendance at the door, and he handed the letter to this man. Then he turned with an apology of his guests.

"It is necessary that we should find out," he explained, "as soon as possible, the whole record of Mlle. Celie."

He lighted a cigar, and over the coffee he put a question to Ricardo.

"Now tell me what you make of the case. What M. Wethermill thinks—that is clear, is it not? Helene Vauquier is the guilty one. But you, M. Ricardo? What is your opinion?"

Ricardo Sums Up the Case.

Ricardo took from his pocketbook a sheet of paper, and from his pocket a pencil. He was intensely flattered by the request of Hanaud, and he proposed to do himself justice. "I will make a note here of what I think the salient features of the mystery;" and he proceeded to tabulate the points in the following way:

(1) Celie Harland made her entrance into Mme. Dauvray's household under very doubtful circumstances.

(2) By methods still more doubtful she acquired an extraordinary ascendancy over Mme. Dauvray's mind.

(3) If proof were needed how complete that ascendancy was, a glance at Celie Harland's wardrobe would suffice, for she wore the most expensive clothes.

(4) It was Celie Harland who arranged that Servettaz, the chauffeur, should be absent at Chambery on the Tuesday night—the night of the murder.

(5) It was Celie Harland who bought the cord with which Mme. Dauvray was strangled and Helene Vauquier bound.

(6) The footsteps outside the salon show that Celie Harland ran from the salon to the motor car.

(7) Celie Harland pretended that there should be a seance on the Tuesday, but she dressed as though she had in view an appointment with a lover, instead of a spiritualistic seance.

(8) Celie Harland has disappeared.

These eight points are strongly suggestive of Celie Harland's complicity in the murder. But I have no clue which will enable me to answer the following questions:

(a) Who was the man who took part in the crime?

(b) Who was the woman who came to the villa on the evening of the murder with Mme. Dauvray and Celie Harland?

(c) What actually happened in the salon? How was the murder committed?

(d) Is Helene Vauquier's story true?

(e) What did the torn-up scrap of writing mean? (Probably spirit writing in Celie Harland's hand.)

(f) Why has one cushion on the settee a small, fresh, brown stain, which is probably blood? Why is the other cushion torn?

To be continued Monday.

The Tricks of the Shoppers

By MABEL HERBERT URNER

THE clerk held up the shimmering silk. "It's a beautiful piece, and every yard of it is guaranteed."

Mrs. Gardner stood back and viewed it critically. "And now hold up the other piece."

The clerk did so. "It's just a matter of choice as to the shade," he said. "The quality is the same."

After a little more hesitation Mrs. Gardner finally decided. "I think I'll take this. The other is rather light."

"Yes, m'am. Now how many yards will you need?"

"Let me see. That's twenty-four inches, isn't it?"

"Yes; full twenty-four."

"Then thirteen will be plenty."

He measured off the length. Here Mrs. Gardner drew from her purse a card on which was printed:

MISS MARIE S. WALKER
Dressmaker
——Columbus Avenue.

The clerk had taken up the card. "Are you Miss Walker"

Mrs. Gardner nodded.

"And are you registered here?"

Again Mrs. Gardner nodded.

Got the Inside Price

The clerk made out the check, allowing the inside price and the discount. The regular price of the silk was $1.50 a yard.

The inside price was $1.42 and the discount was 6 per cent. On the thirteen yards Mrs. Gardner made a saving of over $2.

"You wish this sent?" the clerk asked.

"No, no," quickly. "I'm in a hurry for it. I think I'd better take it with me."

She had to wait while the check was sent to the office for verification. But as "Miss Marie S. Walker" was registered there, the discounts were allowed. In a few moments Mrs. Gardner received her change and her package, containing the thirteen yards of silk.

Next she hurried over to the trimming counter, where she bought the lace; then to the notion counter for the findings, demanding and receiving the discounts on each purchase. And when, finally, she left the store, she had with her all the materials for her gown.

How did she manage it

Miss Marie S. Walker had made her a gown over two years ago, when she had taken a number of her cards and had ever since used them to secure discounts.

Easy Thing in a Big City

As Miss Walker usually does her shopping through samples and errand girls, she was not known by the clerks. And, in any event, there are, in a great city, so many dressmakers, so many stores, and so many clerks that the chance of identification is very slight.

And even if a clerk should happen to know she was not Miss Walkeer, she had only to say that she was buying it for Miss Walker and thought it would simplify things to represent her.

The variations of this scheme are infinite. The securing of discounts under false pretenses, as dressmakers or purchasing agents, is one of the most difficult problems with which the big department store has to contend.

To-day's Best Story

THE remarkable resemblance of Victor Herbert and Wilton Lackaye has often been the subject of comment. It also happens that both gentlemen possess decided opinions, are not averse to airing them, and rigidly refuse to yield a point taken in argument.

The other day they were standing on the pavement in front of the Lambs' Club in New York loudly discussing some matter of immediate interest.

Another member of the Lambs stepped out, looked at them, and then retreated to the club's interior. He went to the telephone and called up the proprietor of the sanitarium.

"Come get me, doctor," said he. "I need a rest. I know, doctor, I've been hitting it up lately, but I didn't think I was that bad. What's the matter? Why, I just saw Victor Herbert standing in front of himself quarreling with himself."

THE MORNING MARSHAL

Your forces are often weak and straggling in the morning. They need to be mobilized.

That is precisely what our coffee will do for you. It will marshal your disbanded powers into action.

But a poor thin coffee cannot do this. It must be a coffee that is

(1) A quickening force for the day, yet—

(2) Free from harmful reaction.

And this is one way of describing

CHASE & SANBORN'S SEAL BRAND COFFEE

1 and 2 pound cans. Never in bulk.

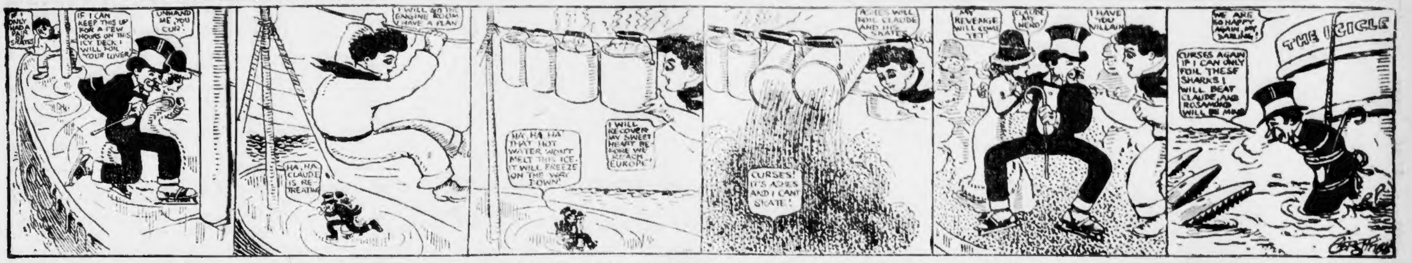
A Continued Picture Drama of Love and Hate, with a Thrill in Its Every Picture



IF I ONLY HAD A PAIR OF SKATES
IF I CAN KEEP THIS UP FOR A FEW HOURS ON THIS ICY DECK I WILL FOIL YOUR LOVER
UNHAND ME, YOU CUR!
I WILL GO TO THE ENGINE ROOM I HAVE A PLAN
HA, HA, CLAUDE IS RETREATING
HA, HA, HA! THAT HOT WATER WON'T MELT THIS ICE. IT WILL FREEZE ON THE WAY DOWN!
I WILL RECOVER MY SWEETHEART BEFORE WE REACH EUROPE!
ASHES WILL FOIL CLAUDE AND HIS SKATES
CURSES! IT'S ASHES AND I CAN'T SKATE!
MY REVENGE WILL COME YET
CLAUDE MY HERO!
I HAVE YOU VILLAIN
WE ARE SO HAPPY AGAIN MY DARLING!
CURSES AGAIN IF I CAN ONLY FOIL THESE SHARKS I WILL BEAT CLAUDE AND ROSAMOND WILL BE MINE
THE ICICLE

The good ship Icicle is headed for Europe with a cargo of ice. We can't see the sense of shipping ice to foreign parts when you can get such good prices for it here, but that's another story, as Hogan says. What is more to the point is that Desmond is skating all around the deck trying to keep out of Claude's way.

As our hero has no skates, he is at a disadvantage. He can run on the ice all right, but he can't turn quickly enough to catch the villain when he dodges. So he decides to put into execution a little plan which he has doped out. If you will have patience for a few minutes, you will see what you will see.

The fun is about to begin. Claude has been down in the engine room and hoisted up a lot of buckets. We do not know what they contain, but Desmond thinks it's hot water, and he figures it won't do a bit of harm because it will freeze before it strikes the deck. He may be right, and then again he may not.

If you have been laboring under the delusion that Claude is not a wise guy, forget it. Those buckets are filled with ashes, and when our hero empties them on the deck, it's all off with the skating. Did you ever have some grouchy old geezer pull that stunt on you just as you had fixed up a nice slide in front of his house?

With the help of the crew, it's an easy matter for Claude to capture the villain. It would have been more heroic if he had turned the trick single handed, but what's the use of taking unnecessary risks? Claude's object is not to gain the applause of the multitude, but to save fair Rosamond.

This is one of the most effective ways to dispose of a villain that we ever heard of—letting him hang by a rope from the stern of the ship where the sharks can nibble at him to their heart's content. Rather brutal, but Desmond deserves it. We're going to print some more pictures on Monday. Watch for them.

An Old Hen and a Young Duckling

By WINIFRED BLACK

Dear Winifred Black:

What are we mothers to do with the modern daughter who comes home from college full of "isms" and all the new thought possible for one mind to absorb?

Shall she, for instance, be allowed full liberty to go where and when she likes, even to the extent of Bohemian suppers with other college girls and men friends? Shall she be permitted to invite these latter—the men—to her home, and entertain them into the night—until midnight, say? They not being at all in her own set, but supposedly honest though rather unconventional. Should these things receive no judicious protest, or, if so, how meet the cry, "curtailing liberty," "destroying individuality," "preventing personal freedom of action," without which no home can be a happy or successful one?

It is a difficult problem when the maiden is young, fair and with more than the average amount of intelligence, and very capable.

The old hens fears for her duckling. What do you think?

AN ANXIOUS MOTHER.

NOW, dear, sweet, sensible, anxious, loving hen, don't you worry another minute. Your duckling is all right, as long as you're with her, but you stay with her every step of the road, until she gets over being so "brand new."

Of course, she does know a good many things that you don't. Of course, she's learned some things at college that you've never heard of—and wouldn't be interested in anyway—and, of course, she looks upon you as a nice, sweet, amiable, not particularly clever, old-fashioned mamma.

You may have the wisdom of the ancients, the wit of all the Attic philosophers, and the charm of Cleopatra. To her you are just "Mamma," greatly to be loved, petted, patronized and pitied. Never mind, she's just going through the "college fever." It's very trying while it lasts, but it's no more dangerous than the measles, and it won't last very much longer.

Let her have her way in all the little foolish, self-confident absurdities she thinks are so important. Have your way, and insist upon having it, when it comes to matters which really mean something.

Let her invite all the long-haired freaks she wants to your house. Meet them and invite them there yourself. Have them to dinner and to tea and to luncheon and to small and earlys of all sorts. Affect a desperate interest in them. Do your best to interest them in you, find out who they are and what they are, and what it is about them that so fascinates your daughter. Some of them may really be worth while; those who are not will soon wear out the eager enthusiasm of a girl whose active mind will not allow her to sit around and do nothing but wait for a husband. Make your daughter's interests your own, but as to the Bohemian suppers and the late visits and all the other "unconventional affairs," none of those for any daughter of mine.

You know more in a minute about the realities of life than this daughter of yours will ever know till she's married and settled down, and you must not let her drift into dangerous follies.

A long-haired freak is just as compromising at 2 o'clock in the morning as the most conventional man in the world. Men are men and women are women, and all the college education and advanced ideas in the world do not change by one syllable the old, old story that Adam told Eve in the Garden.

Don't worry about daughter. She'll come to in a little while. Just be among those present when she does come to—and beforehand, for that matter—and some day you and she will have a god laugh over the whole affair.

A Courtship in the Park

MANY'S the time I've found your face,
Fresh as a bunch of flowers in May,
Waiting for me at our own old place
At the end of the working day.

Many's the time I've held your hand
On the shady seat in the good old park,
And blessed the blaring row of the band,
And kissed you there in the dark.

Many's the time you promised true,
Swore it with kisses, swore it with tears,
"I'll marry no one without it's you—
If we have to wait for years."

And now it's another chap in the park
That holds your hand as I used to do;
And I kiss another girl in the dark,
And try to fancy it's you.

☘ ☘ Lucille Entertains a Friend ☘ ☘

RUTH RITCHEY had an out-of-town friend, Eloise Nixon, visiting her last week, and I decided to entertain for her.

"That will be delightful, Lucille," said Ruth, when I spoke to her about it. "What kind of an affair will you have?"

"Oh, just a nice party," I answered. "You must be sure to keep Friday evening for me."

I was just making out my invitation list when Arthur Knight 'phoned me that he had theatre tickets for Friday evening and asked me if I could go.

"Yes, indeed, I can go," I answered. Then I told him that I was giving a party for Eloise Nixon Saturday evening. Not having sent out my invitations, it was, of course, a very easy matter to change the date of my party. I was rather glad to have it a day later so that mother and Cousin Fannie would have a little more time to do the necessary baking, for I had determined to save a caterer's bill by having ample, homemade refreshments.

Father talked to me quite seriously at the beginning of this year about trying to avoid extravagances, so I intend to cut down expenses in every way I can. I told mother that I knew good coffee, salad, rolls, cake and ice cream would be acceptable to my guests as a more elaborate supper served by a caterer, and she said with a sigh that she supposed it would.

Mother has a dreadful habit of sighing. Sometimes it gets on my nerves awfully, but I always try to be patient with my dear mother.

* * *

Friday I went downtown to get a fresh pair of white gloves and a new hair ornament to wear to the theatre. I met Ruth and Miss Nixon in the store.

"Why," asked Ruth, laughingly, "aren't you at home getting ready for your party?"

"Oh, the party is coming on nicely," I returned.

"Well, you must be a good manager, Lucile," she said. "Now, if I were giving a party to-night I should be at home running from one room to another seeing about everything."

"But, you know, it's not to-night," I reminded her.

"Why, Lucile, you told us distinctly that the party was to be Friday night," insisted Ruth.

"Well, at first I did intend to have it to-night," I explained, "but something came up that made it inconvenient, so I sent out the invitations for to-morrow night. I thought, of course, you knew."

"You didn't notify us," Ruth declared.

"Dear me, didn't I? How heedless of me! You know, Ruth, when one is in such a society whirl as I am all the time one will occasionally forget some little thing. You must forgive me, dear."

Ruth looked almost sour as I parted with them and hurried on. Her friend's face wore an amusing expression of mystification, she being evidently a girl of small social experience.

Saturday evening, when Ruth and her friend came into the drawing room and saw the card tables, Ruth asked: "You're not going to have bridge, are you?"

"Yes, of course," I replied.

"Eloise doesn't play bridge," announced Ruth, solemnly.

"Doesn't play bridge! Surely Ruth is joking," I said, turning to Miss Nixon.

"No, I don't play," she answered. "But it doesn't matter at all. I can watch the games."

"I'm very sorry, indeed, that you don't play," I said. "It never occurred to me that there was any one in society nowadays who didn't know bridge. You will certainly have to learn."

Other guests began to arrive then, and in a few moments every one except Miss Nixon was deep in bridge. She wandered around among the tables a little, looking so lost and forlorn that I was really glad when she started reading a magazine.

* * *

When all the guests but she and Miss Nixon had gone Ruth drew me aside and said: "It may interest you to know that Eloise and I were invited to the theatre to-night, and that we had to withdraw our acceptances when we learned that your party was to be this evening. I certainly didn't tell you when I saw you yesterday because I thought it might make you uncomfortable. But I now think you ought to know it.

"If you had only told me yesterday that you were to have bridge Eloise might have been spared this extremely gay evening. Of course, I'm greatly obliged to you for entertaining in her honor."

I was so astonished at this rude outburst of sarcasm that I made no reply. Indeed, I should regret having taken the trouble to do anything for Ruth and her friend were it not for the fact that the party, which was really a distinct success notwithstanding Ruth's ill-humor, has cleared off a great many of my social obligations.

The Tragedy of Neatness

The Pathetic Story of the Woman Who Was Spic and Span Throughout Life

By FRANCES L. GARSIDE.

WHEN she was a little girl she never played as other children played, because games took the starch out of her stiff little pinafores and disarranged the hair plastered slick and tight to her head.

There is a suspicion that her courtship was conducted through a correspondence school; a mail order lover doesn't kiss a girl and muss her hair, and she would have nothing to do with one who did.

But whatever the manner in which she was courted, she was married one day, and when, in time, the babies came, she scrubbed them as vigorously as if they had been kitchen floors, and washed all their vitality away, and they grew up thin and white, but very, very clean.

Scouring and cleaning became her ruling passions, and when, once upon a time, her husband took sick, her care of him was not absorbing, because the scrubbing brush called and the kitchen's need of her was greater.

"Father has fainted," called one of the clean little children one day.

"I can't do anything for him," she called from the kitchen, "until I have cleaned and put away his medicine glass and spoon."

How Father Revived

The poor man had to take his time coming out of the faint. "I can't throw water on him," explained the neat woman to her children, "some might spatter on the carpet."

She had few friends, because friendship meant interruption of cleaning and misplaced chairs, but she was a happy woman. She found happiness that passeth masculine understanding in the boast that in twenty years her washing had always appeared on the line on Monday and that she kept the dishes and pans in her kitchen in the same place, and could get a meal in the dark.

Of course, no occasion ever arose for going into the kitchen and cooking a meal in the dark, but this woman could have done it, and she was happy in the thought.

She always put everything in the house in perfect order before she left it, and, on one noted occasion, she had gone three blocks from home when she suddenly gave a loud scream, and ran back as rapidly as if she were racing with a fire horse.

The neighbors who saw her gathered up their skirts and ran with her, for they feared some great calamity. Perhaps her husband was hurt, or one of the clean little babies had fallen out a window, or the house was on fire; and as they ran, a breathless lot, other women joined them until a great crowd reached the woman's door.

"I ran back," she explained, almost breathless, "because I remembered that I had left my kitchen apron over a chair, instead of hanging it on the nail."

There were not many who loved this neat woman, because her life was such a scrubbed and shining reproach to their freedom and carelessness, but she did not miss their love.

She enjoyed her brush and broom, and death came before she realized the tragedy of being too old to wield them. She was spared what would have been the Great Sorrow in such a life contemplation of the day when she would be gone and her successor would put the broom where the mop ought to be.

CELERY TOAST

A DAINTY dish for Sunday evening is celery toast. For a small family clean one moderate sized stalk of celery, using all of the stalk and the tender leaves. Cut in small pieces and place in dish over fire, with just enough water to cook it. Add a generous pint of milk and let it remain over the fire until scalded. Thicken slightly with flour and add a small pinch of butter. Pour over slices of well browned toast.

SAUERKRAUT AND SPARERIBS

Put one quart of kraut over fire with barely enough water to cover it. Let boil slowly one and a half hours, then add one and a half pounds of spareribs and one large potato grated. Mix potato well with kraut and cook another hour and a half. Kraut cooked merely one hour is an inferior dish, but cooked as described is a dish fit for a king.

A Thrilling Story of the Highbinders of San Francisco

The Shadow of Quong Lung

Mystery of the Orient Transplanted to America :: By Dr. C. W. Doyle

Copyright by C. W. Doyle

Synopsis of Preceding Instalments.

Quong Lung, the dreaded dictator of San Francisco's Chinatown, is the moving spirit of the most powerful tong in that great quarter. Through a thousand secret emissaries he holds in the hollow of his hand the lives of many men. Ah Foon is the trusted member of the inner circle, or conclave and the head of Quong's information bureau. He has offended Lee Yup, a tong chief, who plans to ruin him.

Lee learns that Ah Foon has recently imported a beautiful wife from China and, by insidious means and false charges, he works upon Quong's feelings and wins the Great Dominator's consent to bring Ah Foon to trial. Ah Foon is to be accused as a traitor and sentenced to the "Civil Death," which causes the wives of all traitors to be awarded to the Strong.

Quong at once calls Ah Foon before him, and begins by demanding the satisfaction of a debt of $1,200. Ah Foon, amazed at this sudden change in his chief's demeanor, begins to plead for time.

Quong suggests that Ah Foon can surrender his wife in payment of the debt, and when Ah Foon rises in rage, a trap door opens and the debtor falls into a dungeon. Quong then goes to Luey See, Ah Foon's wife, with a letter supposed to be written by her husband.

"OH, ye Gods of my Ancestors!" exclaimed Luey See, as she staggered against the wall. "Ah Foon, Ah Foon, where art thou?"

And the man with the deep, sympathetic voice on the other side of the door, said, "He hath gone—and with another woman! * * * And he is not worthy of thy love."

After the frenzy of weeping on Luey See's side of the door had abated somewhat, the fatherly voice on the street asked: "But the letter; what of the letter?"

"I will read it to thee," was the reply. Then, after a pause, Luey See went on. "The writing hath the seal of Ah Foon, and is, doubtless, his. Perchance there may be some comfort in it."

And this is what Luey See read aloud to the Man on the Other side of the Door:

"Luey See, the man who will deliver this to thee is to be trusted in all things, even as is thy father. Were it not for the aid he is willing to give thee out of the so well-known goodness of his heart thou wert in poor case, and would but receive thy deserts and just punishment. For it is known to me that the Babe to Come is no child of mine. Farewell, and may the gods remove thy feet from the paths of shame and dishonour."

"Oh, Ah Foon, Ah Foon! some villain hath lied to thee in this matter. Oh, Babe to Come, thy father is the dupe of some devil from the pit, or else he hath been overcome by a sudden madness."

The Voice of the Consoler

"My poor child," said the deep voice interrupting Luey See's sobs, "Ah Foon hath, indeed, been overcome by a madness—the madness of love for a woman other than his wife. Oh, the inconstancy of man! He went away last night with the wife of Ah Lee, who should have been sacred to him, seeing that Ah Lee belongs to the same tong. Worse hath he done; he hath shamefully betrayed the secrets of his tong. Let us hope he may reach the south land safely and conceal himself successfully, else were he subject to——"

"To what, thou with the friendly voice?" asked Luey See eagerly.

"Never mind, Little One; never mind. I have said too much."

"But I must know, I must know! Ah Foon is still my husband and will return to me when his madness leaveth him, and I am fain to know what he is to expect, so that I may warn him. Will they slay him?"

"Nay, my poor child. But see, the city waketh, and here is my good wife, Suey See, to comfort thee in thy sorrow. A good woman who is also a mother is like a rare unguent to a burn."

There was a rattle of wheels, and a hack stopped in front of the door whereat Quong Lung stood. A middle-aged Chinese woman emerged from the hack and approached the door.

"Speak to the poor stricken child, Suey See; she is just within the door. Tell her that she shall make her home with us till Ah Foon's madness hath left him. She shall have honorable refuge in my house, and no man may molest any one who crosses thy threshold." And with these words Quong Lung departed, leaving his wife to plead with Luey See.

It ended in Luey See getting into the hack and going to the house of Quong Lung.

Before they departed, Luey See left a writing on the table upstairs for Ah Foon. "He will find it when his madness hath left him," she pleaded.

That night, so deftly was she plied with "sympathy" by Suey See, and so great was the shock produced by Ah Foon's abandonment of her, that the feeble flame of the Babe to Come was extinguished.

* * * And Luey See lost her reason at the same time.

CHAPTER IV.

A Council of the Mighty

"BE seated!" commanded Quong Lung. The council was concerned with the affairs of one of the largest tongs in San Francisco. It had been convened to deal with the recalcitrant Ah Foon, who was alleged to have betrayed the affairs of the tong—a crime punishable by death.

"My brothers," began the fateful Quong Lung, "the affairs of our countrymen in this land have made it necessary that they should band themselves together for their mutual protection and advancement. Would that I could say that the companies that have thus come into existence were bound together by the bonds of amity and good will; but, as ye all know, their jealousies have brought about the relentless wars of the tongs, which never cease.

"It has become absolutely necessary under such circumstances to conserve the interests of this our tong by secret signs and tokens known only to the brethren. Further, it was settled in open session, as ye know, that the betrayal of the secrets of our tong should entail death on the traitor.

"It is with deep sorrow, therefore," he went on, "that I have to announce that our brother, Ah Foon, is accused of having turned traitor; and we are here for the purpose of inquiring into the matter and of adjusting the verdict to the finding of the brethren assembled. Bring in the prisoner, Wau Shun."

The Change in Ah Foon

Two weeks' confinement in Quong Lung's underground dungeon had wrought a considerable change in Ah Foon's appearance and morale. In the cringing, blinking creature that entered the room between Wau Shun and Sam Lee one could scarcely recognize the former jaunty wag, whose saucy tongue used to set the tong into a roar. A thin beard straggled on his lips and chin, and he looked helplessly about him as he took the seat assigned to him.

"Quong Lung's tender care for our brother," whispered Lee Yung to Nu Fong, "hath greatly spiritualized Ah Foon; he looks like one whom discipline—the discipline of Quong Lung—had deprived of his grosser parts, including much of his protecting fat."

"Who accuses our brother Ah Foon?" demanded Quong Lung.

"I do," answered Lee Yup rising to his feet.

"Proceed in thy accusation, brother," said Quong Lung.

"Nay, thou Strong and Merciful," interrupted Ah Foon, "it were hardly fair in a matter involving life and death that I should be brought to trial of my brethren while Famine still hath me in her clutch. Brethren, I am faint for want of food and drink; my inanition is equalled only by my innocence, and when the body is feeble the mind likewise is lacking in vigor. Our tong hath ever been famous for its fairness in matters of this sort."

The Betrayal of a Tong

At a signal from Quong Lung food and sam shu were set before Ah Foon, the while the tong observed a silence in keeping with the solemn function they were assembled to observe.

When Ah Foon's wants had been satisfied, Lee Yup once more rose to his feet. "My brothers," he began, "I can add nothing to the significant utterances of Quong Lung concerning the obligation imposed upon each one of us to safeguard the secrets and interests of this our tong. Beset as we are by warring and hostile tongs, an injury to our society is an injury to every member of it. But I will not waste the time of my brothers in speaking thus generally. Know, then, that in this writing,"—and Lee Yup laid a roll of paper upon the table—"there is ample proof that Ah Foon hath sold the passwords and secrets of this our tong to one Ah Kee, of the Ong Ding Tong, who has thus been enabled to attend many of our meetings. The late insolence of the Ong Ding Tongs is now easily explained."

"Ah Kee, of the Ong Ding Tong, my brothers," remonstrated Ah Foon, "is unknown to me. The writing on the table is a forgery, and I demand its reading, so that I may refute it."

Lee Yup unrolled the document and read as follows:

"I, Ah Kee, being a member in good standing of the Ong Ding Tong, make statement that by the assistance of Ah Foon, for a certain consideration, I have attended many meetings of the tong whereof he is a member."

TODAY'S STOCK MARKETS; FINANCIAL NEWS

STOCK MARKET CLOSES WEAK

STATE STREET, Feb. 25.—Closing: Because of their inability to interest the public by advancing prices during the early trading floor traders and the professional element became bearish and sold the market freely during the last half hour, resulting in a weak closing.

There was no trace of nervousness at the opening, and the market was given the appearance of renewed strength under the leadership of Canadian Pacific, which went to a new high record. Steel preferred was also strong, but its advance did not seem to effect the common which fluctuated for a long time between 77⅝ and 77⅞ before it could be put to 78⅛, which was only ⅛ above yesterday's close.

As has recently been the case the industrials were used to hold the rails. To do this Virginia Carolina and Cotton Oil were each advanced over 2 points, while the investment rails sagged. When the closing came Missouri Pacific, Southern Pacific and New York Central each were off a point and Southern Railway and St. Paul ⅜ each. The strength given Central in London had little effect as traders realized that the road had much financing to do.

The local market was steady, with the coppers showing a tendency to rise, but were prevented from so doing by the weak tone of New York and the selling by arbitrage brokers of Amalgamated for New York accounts.

AERIAL EXHIBITION WILL CLOSE TO-NIGHT

The New England public is just beginning to realize the value and extent of the Airship Show at Mechanics building. The attendance increased daily, yesterday's being by far the largest. To-day, the last, brought another throng. Sam Perkins, the kite man, is doing some interesting stunts. Models and gliders are in evidence on all sides. Augustus H. Post will deliver a final address to-night.

Good Things to Eat

Signs of Spring are noticeable in the local food market. Fruits and vegetables are coming more plentifully from the South. Dairy products are easier. The market in general is well supplied and prices are comparatively low. The housekeeper ought to remember that she cannot save her steps and her money, too. If she looks around for bargains she will find them.

Meats remain about the same. Rib roasts can be bought for 15 and sirloin roasts for 18 cents. Rump steak is 25 to 35 cents and sirloin is 20 to 28 cents. Lamb is 16 to 20 cents. Lamb chops are 18 to 35 cents; veal chops are 25 and pork chops 16 to 20 cents. Chickens are 20 to 30 cents. Pork is 11 to 16 cents. Ham is 17 cents, and bacon is 18 to 30 cents.

Lobsters are 25 cents a pound, scallops 70 cents a quart. Sea trout, bluefish, halibut and eels are each 18 cents a pound. Salmon is 20 and smelts are 15 to 30 cents.

Eggs are 20 to 32 cents. Butter is 24 to 32 cents. Fancy strawberries are 40 cents a quart. String beans are 15 cents a quart, spinach 30 cents a peck, celery 15 cents a head and lettuce 8 cents.

Deaths.

YANKEES HIT IN LONDON MARKET

LONDON, Feb. 25.—All danger of a panic on the London stock exchange had cleared away to-day, although trading was irregular with fractional losses in American shares slightly predominating. Among the stocks which showed small decreases in the trading at 12:30 were Anaconda, Atchison, Erie, Louisville & Nashville and Reading. A slight increase was shown in New York Central and U. S. Steel.

London brokers are millions of dollars richer to-day as a result of a "trimming" given to Americans by clever trading yesterday.

SENATE FAVORS RULING POLLS

WASHINGTON, Feb. 25.—The Sutherland amendment to the Borah resolution for the popular election of Senators has been adopted.

The amendment gives Congress the right to regulate elections, including the right to prevent Southern States from interfering with the right of suffrage.

A Want Advt. is often the road to fortune.

LLOYD GEORGE SERIOUSLY ILL

LONDON, Feb. 25.—Grave fears are felt here for the Chancellor of the Exchequer, David Lloyd George. He is confined to his bed as a result of nervous prostration, resulting from hard work in Parliament.

JOHN F. ELMORE DEAD.

NEW YORK, Feb. 25.—John F. Elmore, former U. S. Minister to Peru, died suddenly at the Astor House to-day, aged seventy.

HYDE PARK FOR ANNEXATION

The selectmen of Hyde Park began work to-day on a bill for presentation to the Legislature for the annexation of Hyde Park to Boston as a result of the vote taken yesterday in the town which showed a majority of 238 in a total of 1,730 ballots cast.

Mayor Fitzgerald is known to be in favor of annexation.

Nearly everybody in Boston reads the AMERICAN.

The Value of Solitude

Don't Be a Sheep or a Deer. Don't Devote Your Hours to the Company and Conversations of Those Who Know as Little as You Do

Copyright, 1911, by American-Journal-Examiner

We inflict a piece of advice upon our readers. It is intended especially for the young, who have still to get their growth, whose characters and possibilities are forming.

GET AWAY FROM THE CROWD WHEN YOU CAN. KEEP YOURSELF TO YOURSELF, IF ONLY FOR A FEW HOURS DAILY.

Full individual growth, special development, rounded mental operations—all these demand room, separation from others, solitude, self-examination and the self-reliance which solitude gives.

The finest tree stands off by itself in the open plain. Its branches spread wide. It is a complete tree, better than the cramped tree in the crowded forest.

The animal to be admired is not that which runs in herds, the gentle browsing deer or foolish sheep thinking only as a fraction of the flock, incapable of personal independent direction. It's the lonely prowling lion or the big black leopard with the whole world for his private field that is worth looking at.

The man who grows up in a herd, deer-like, thinking with the herd, acting with the herd, rarely amounts to anything.

Do you want to succeed? Grow in solitude, work, develop in solitude, with books and thoughts and nature for friends. Then, if you want the crowd to see how fine you are, come back to it, and boss it if it will let you.

Constant craving for indiscriminate company is a sure sign of mental weakness.

Schopenhauer—a sour genius, BUT a genius—speaks contemptuously of the negroes herded in small rooms unable to get "enough of one another's snub-nose company."

If you enter a village or small town and want to find the man or youth of ability, do you look for him leaning over the village pool table, sitting on the grocery store boxes, lounging in the smelly tavern with other vacant minds?

Certainly not. You find him at work, and you find him by himself.

Think how public institutions dwarf the brains and souls of unhappy children condemned to live in them. No chance there for individual, separate development. Millions of children have grown up in such places millions of sad nonentities.

Here is what Goethe says:

"Es bildet ein Talent sich in der Stille, doch ein Charakter in dem Strome der Welt." (Talent is developed in solitude, character in the rush of the world.)

You wonder why so much ability comes from the country—why a Lincoln comes from the backwoods while you, flourishing in a great city, can barely keep your place as a typewriter.

The countryman has GOT to be by himself much of the time whether he wishes to or not. If he has anything in him it comes out.

Astronomy, man's grandest study, grew up among the shepherds. You of the cities never even see the stars, much less study them.

Don't be a sheep or a deer. Don't devote your hours to the company and conversation of those who know as little as you do. Don't think hard only when you are trying to remember a popular song or to decide on the color of your Winter overcoat or necktie.

Remember that you are an individual, not a grain of dust or a blade of grass. Don't be a sheep; be a man. It has taken Nature a hundred million years to produce you. Don't make her sorry she took the time.

Get out in the park and walk and think. Get up in your hall bedroom, read, study, write what you think. Talk more to yourself and less to others. Avoid magazines, avoid excessive newspaper reading.

There is not a man of average ability but could make a striking career if he could but WILL to do the best that is in him.

Proofs of growth due to solitude are endless. Milton's greatest work was done when blindness, old age and the death of the Puritan government forced him into completest seclusion. Beethoven did his best work in the solitude of deafness.

Bacon would never have been the great leader of scientific thought had not his trial and disgrace forced him from the company of a grand retinue and stupid court to the solitude of his own brain.

"Multum insola fuit anima mea." (My spirit hath been much alone.) This he said often, and lucky it was for him. Loneliness of spirit made him.

Get a little of it for yourself.

Drop your club, your street corner, your gossipy boarding house table. Drop your sheep life and try being a man.

It may improve you.

LETTERS FROM AMERICAN READERS

RICHES AND WORKMEN.

Editor AMERICAN:

In the AMERICAN I noticed that Andrew Carnegie claims to have been the means of making forty-three millionaires; also, in an address to working girls, he said he would rather be born poor than a millionaire, and that the only right a man has to wealth lies in his acquiring it by some useful labor. All well and good. But did Mr. Carnegie acquire his vast wealth all "by his lonesome"? I think not! No man could ever accumulate so much money by his own unaided industry. Did not Mr. Carnegie employ several thousand workmen? They were the real producers of the Carnegie millions. Granted that Mr. Carnegie was the controlling power, where would the product come from without the man in the overalls? I think it is time the working men and women of this country made some protest against such boastful assertions of Mr. Carnegie and other so-called "self-made men." OVERALLS.

Saco, Me.

POOR BOY'S BLESSINGS

Editor AMERICAN:

There can be no question of the truth and logic contained in Rev. Dr. Parkhurst's recent article on "Training That Develops the Real Man," but a little more light on the justice side of the question would be welcomed by many, I am sure. If it is a blessing for the poor boy to have to rough it and shift for himself from the start, why should the rich boy be debarred from equal participation in that blessing? Why should the one be given so much opportunity to develop and bring out the best that is in him, while the other is handicapped. We look in vain for justice in such an arrangement. And again, why is it that with fathers and mothers the natural impulse to endeavor to provide, as far as possible, a future free from want for their children is so great and universal? Should children honor their fathers and their mothers for such provident and loving care? E. ARPIN.

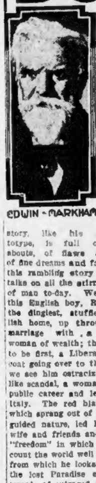
BOOKLAND

EDITED BY·EDWIN MARKHAM



EDWIN - MARKHAM

Roswell Field and John Vance Cheney, Associate Editors

H. G. WELLS has written in his "The New Machiavelli," a big, bold novel. It is not a well ordered piece of literature, but a book full of laps and gaps, and somewhat incoherently stretched and smoothed, as life itself is often ridged and bridged, with the inconsistent and the inexplicable.

The hero of the story, like his shifty historic prototype, is full of feints and face-abouts, of flaws and follies, but also of fine dreams and fair actions. We follow this rambling story full of brilliant side-talks on all the stirring issues in the mind of man to-day. We watch the career of this English boy, Remington, rising from the dingiest, stuffiest, middle-class English home, up through college, and into marriage with a fine high-principled woman of wealth; then on into Parliament, to be first, a Liberal leader, next a turncoat going over to the Tories. And finally we see him ostracized through a Parnell-like scandal, a woman affair, that ends his public career and leaves him an exile in Italy. The red blaze of sexual passion, which sprang out of his unguarded and unguided nature, led him at last to desert wife and friends and party and flee to a "freedom" in which he thought he would count the world well lost—fettered freedom from which he looks back with longing at the lost Paradise encircled by the fiery swords of outraged public opinion.

This is the hasty diagram of a story vibrating with life—a story challenging, defying, bludgeoning institutions and ideals that the hero conceives to harass and hamper man. Egotistic, self-centred is the hero—he (like a man in a dream) being the pivotal thing in all the drama of life and love and politics going on about him. For as in Arnold Bennett's "Clayhangers" all the progress of affairs is sustained in the novel as the mere background of this insistent self-centred hero, this man who helps to shape, and is himself shaped, by the movements of the world.

There is plain-speaking in these pages, some of it as disagreeable as some of the old Fielding pages. Mr. Wells discusses questions which our own novelists, Herrick and Phillips, have sometimes been daring enough to touch. The book's most radical attack is upon the prudish treatment of the great central fact of life—the fact of sex and its manifestations. The hero, Remington (like all the young people of England and America) is given no instruction, no protection against this imperious life-force born within him.

The people of the book form a new and disturbing set of characters to introduce into the home circle. The book is scarcely one that we should want to read aloud at the family table. Nevertheless, there is a fierce sincerity in the volume; and there is no episode where vice is sanctioned or where virtue is sneered away.

(Duffield & Co., Publishers, New York. $1.35 net.)

Kirkpatrick Wars Against War

"War—What For?" is George Kirkpatrick's somewhat pugnacious plea for peace. Mr. Kirkpatrick, who is an orator of power, writes this book with a tremendous earnestness, making the plea that the working classes have the folly to furnish the "cripples and the corpses" of the wars that are waged in the interests of the stay-at-home political and industrial rulers.

He details the cruel cost of war in blood and in money. He sweeps up all the grim statistics of the havoc of war; he tatters all the shibboleths that influence men to go to war. He masses his facts and figures in a cumulative horror.

Kirkpatrick's style is telegraphic, ejaculatory, breathless; and he certainly makes a black case against militarism. The pages are a continuous series of explosions. Here is what you find on the paper-jacket of the book:

"Capitalists want wars.

"Politicians declare wars.

"Preachers pray for victories in wars.

"Workingmen fight the wars.

"If the masters want blood let them cut their own throats.

"Let those who want 'great victories' go to the firing line and get them.

"If war is good enough to pray for, it is good enough to go to—up close where steel flashes, bones snap and blood spurts.

"They say, 'War is Hell.'

"Well, then, let those who want hell, go to hell."

(George R. Kirkpatrick, Publisher, West Lafayette, Ohio. $1.20.)

Ralph Waldo Trine's New Volume

Mr. Trine, author of "The Life Books" series, has worked over an old volume into a new one called "The Land of Living Men." In a simple way, as at the fireside or over the rail fence, Mr. Trine talks of the problems of social and political life. He gives the practical, sensible view of our many perplexing questions, and his large audience in England, in Germany and in America will be glad to add this volume to their shelf of Trine books that leads off with his famous "In Tune with the Infinite." The new book is crammed with wise suggestions.

Here are a few words for the young politician, words worthy of highest praise:

"To the young man who will consent to stand for or who will aspire to public office, I would say, be sufficiently wise and farsighted as not to aim for nor to stop at the politician's stage. You will have to dirty your fingers continually, and you will have to lower your ideal and your whole trend of life if you do; you will have to associate with and have as your constant and many times unwelcome companions dirty and selfish and scheming men.

"If the stuff is in you, then I beg of you to strike for the higher ground. If the stuff is in you you may reach the statesman stage; but you will reach it only by never making a deal whereby honor is sacrificed and being far-sighted enough and brave and resolute enough to stand and to stand uncompromisingly for such measures of public policy and such methods of party management as are always for the people's greatest good."

Julia Ward Howe's "At Sunset."

To Julia Ward Howe the cradle fairies brought no thwarting gifts. She lived and died blessed by all that men call good—love, honor and troops of friends—the beauty and the joy of life. She had the happiness to write our great national battle hymn in an hour of national crisis; and the memory of that service never faded from the hearts of her countrymen.

Until the close of a long life she kept her interest in public events. Her last poems are now published in a volume entitled "At Sunset." She wrote many verses for significant occasions, like the Lincoln Centennial, the Hudson-Fulton celebration, the Peace Congress. In her book there are also many tributes to personal friends, like Dr. Holmes, Phillips Brooks and the poet Whittier.

Her poetry is the call of the New England conscience strong for righteousness. Her poem "The Glorious Fourth" speaks her passion for justice and peace. In "Margaret Fuller" she rises to a lyric fire that she seldom reaches elsewhere. I quote three quatrains:

"Fate dropt our Margaret
  Into the bitter sea,
A pearl in golden splendor set
  For spirit majesty.

"Th' Egyptian's gem of light
  Flashed in the gleaming wine,
A regal jewel stol'n from sight
  To grace a pomp divine.

"So He who laid our Pearl
  Deep in the sapphire sea
Keeps her rare essence in the cup
  Of immortality.

Books and Bookmen

Are our present-day writers losing their hold and growing stale? There would seem to be this danger if the recent experience of one well-known publisher is the experience of all. He said that within a few weeks he had been obliged to decline novels from no less than four writers whose names are so well known he would have jumped at the chance of having them on his list of authors if their submitted manuscripts had warranted their acceptance.

"But the stories were drivel, rubbish," he said. "I don't know what is coming over our writers. These are all known as successful writers, and none of them seemed to realize that his submitted manuscript was not excellent.

"I don't know whether they've gone stale, whether their public was too easy to win, and they've overproduced until they've lost the power of self-criticism, or what the trouble is. There is no doubt that recently the English writers have been putting it over us. They've learned to write carefully and guard their laurels."

Some one, trying to be funny, called attention recently to the fact that Owen Wister produced only one book every five years, and facetiously suggested that it was because the author lived in Philadelphia, and therefore worked slowly. Be that as it may, a new book is promised in the near future from the pen of this gifted writer. It is safe to say that it will be hailed with delight. It has been ten years since the first appearance of "The Virginian" and five since "Lady Baltimore." An occasional short story is all that the literary world has had from Mr. Wister since. Happily he is not dependent upon his royalties for an income.

George Gibbs is not the only artist who has turned his hand to literature. Robert W. Chambers and F. Hopkinson Smith both scored some success as painters before undertaking to write fiction. Mr. Gibbs, however, stands almost alone in combining the two gifts in one published volume, "The Bolted Door," (D. Appleton & Co.) contained eight illustrations from paintings by the artist-author.

It is said that the two-volume work on "Railroad Traffic and Rates," which the Appletons are publishing, contains the first comprehensive account ever written of the several systems of rates in force in different parts of the United States. The book is by Professors Emory R. Johnson and Grover G. Huebner of the University of Pensylvania.

A distinguished literary authority of London made a careful selection of "fifteen notable works of fiction of 1910." As showing the difference of literary tastes between America and England only six of this "notable fifteen" were published in this country. Two of these six were written by Americans, namely, "Tales of Men and Ghosts," by Mrs. Edith Wharton, and "The Finer Grain," by William James. The other four were "A Motley," by John Galsworthy; "Celt and Saxon," by George Meredith; "Clayhanger," by Arnold Bennett, and "An Affair of Dishonor," by William de Morgan.
